The Church on Top
A Surprised Serpent
Earth's Biggest Crowd
The Railroad Dollar

MAN BUILDS the house for God to dwell therein was the old idea. The modern idea is a combination skyscraper church, stores, offices, apartments, swimming pools, gymnasium. New York's Manhattan Congregational Church will spend $2,000,000 on such a building, twenty-three stories high. The clergy will live on the ground floor.

PERHAPS the first 100-story building will have a church at the top. When Mrs. Stetson established Mrs. Eddy's First Christian Science Church in New York, she ingeniously rented space above a drug store and announced: "Science above drugs.' The great church of the future will announce: "Religion above commerce." Until lately churches were the tallest buildings in all cities.

ONE FRENCHMAN, who killed 2,000,000 poisonous snakes in India, had their skins cured in Switzerland, and sold as ladies' shoes in Paris, is coming to organize snake killing and skinning on a big scale here.

May the French gentleman concentrate on rattlesnakes and oblige many of our States. The Lord (see Genesis iii, 15) warned the guilty serpent: "Upon thy belly shalt thou go and dust shalt thou eat all the days of thy life." And further warned him that, "The seed of the woman shall bruise thy head." Little did the serpent imagine that Eve's female descendants would some day go to and fro in the earth wearing skins of the serpent's descendants as shoe leather. That is having the last word.

HARVARD CLASS ORATOR FLAYS COLLEGE CRITICS

Critics, who have charged that "colleges are country clubs and playgrounds and festivals," and have criticized university men generally, were answered today at Harvard's Class Day exercises by Class Orator Dwight W. Chapman, Jr., of Wilmette, Ill.

Delivering his oration in Sanders Theatre, Chapman declared that neither he nor any of his classmates had found any truth in the critics' assertions.

"You will always observe," he said, "that when a man speaks of college as a country-club, he refers to someone else's college.

"The failings which those who are most eager to criticize lay to the coleges do not correspond to what we have honestly observed in four years of residence. We feel the imputation to be at fault.

ENGINES AND 3 CARS IN HUB TRAIN DERAILED

Two engines and three cars of the Boston & Maine passenger train leaving Concord, N. H., at 8:30 and due in Boston at 10:30 were derailed today at Thornton's Ferry, N. H.

No one was injured, according to Boston & Maine officials, and the south-bound trains following were switched around the wreck and run on the north rails while the other was tied up.

The train, made up of half a dozen coaches, including a baggage car and smoker, is a local that makes most of the stops between White River Junction and Concord and Manchester, Nashua and Lowell thereafter.

One of the two engines on the front end was being brought back to Boston "light."

A relief train made up at Nashua brought the 100 passengers to Boston at noon.

What caused the derailment has not been ascertained. The baggage car, smoker and a coach went off the irons with the two engines.

Byrd Picks 4th Flier; Gale Delays Sea Hop

New York, June 21 (A.P.)—The take-off for France of the four-man crew of the monoplane "America" will be impossible either tonight or tomorrow morning and present atmospheric conditions do not look favorable for a hop-off any time tomorrow, James H. Kimball, Weather Bureau meteorologist, announced today.

"It doesn't look so good now," he said shortly before noon, "as it did before we got the detailed reports of the later morning. There is a storm that has been moving northeast from Hatteras since Sunday night that makes a departure tonight or in the morning impossible.

"That storm is now east of Nantucket and south of Halifax. It is of considerable intensity. There were winds of 48 miles an hour last night off Nantucket and that was not at the centre of the disturbance.

U. S. AND BRITAIN SPLIT ON NAVAL CUT OFFERS

By GEORGE R. HOLMES
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Washington, June 21.—The American delegates at the Geneva Arms Conference will not deviate far from the program of limitation formulated in Washington and presented to the conference by Hugh S. Gibson, it was stated today in authoritative circles.

While it is too early to talk of "ultimatums" or "last words," the fact remains, it was said today, that the program presented by Gibson goes about as far as it is possible to go without putting the United States navy in a position of decided inferiority to Great Britain and Japan.

Some give and take will be necessary, it is anticipated here, but the basic features of the American program are not likely to be altered.

The British counter-proposals are

'MILES' OF SIGNATURES ON PETITIONS GOING TO FULLER FOR SACCO

Side by side, names of college professors, ministers, dock workers and mill hands, inscribed on petitions for Sacco and Vanzetti addressed to Governor Fuller were arranged by the defense committee at No. 256 Hanover street today and will be presented to His Excellency tomorrow. The petitions placed end to end are many miles in length.

Piled in every available space in the defense committee headquarters the petitions which have poured in by thousands almost fill the little office. Mary Donovan, executive secretary; Jessie Green, a stenographer, and Bloom, one of the active workers, made them ready for removal to the State House.

The Governor's council meets tomorrow and it is planned to present the petitions to the Governor before the meeting.

Indications that the Governor's Council may take some action were seen in a request made by the Governor's secretary, Herman L. MacDonald. He requested that the defense committee send a copy of the appeal in pamphlet form to the State House. Gardner Jackson, secretary, delivered twenty copies.

In explaining the thousands of names attached to the petitions, Miss Donovan said today that none of them was solicited. "They are all voluntary," she said. "And as you can see, they come from all walks of life."

Now that Harvard commencement is out of the way, it was said at the State House the President Lowell commission in the next few days would devote all its energies to the review of the case from beginning to end."

MRS. LYDIG ACCUSED OF CONCEALING RICHES

New York, June 21.—Mrs. Rita De Alba De Acosta Lydig, beautiful society woman, is a confirmed drug addict, according to the testimony of her butler, Herman Johnson, in the bankruptcy proceedings involving the former wealthy woman.

Johnson, who for nine years had acted as butler for Mrs. Lydig, testified that he had frequently seen hypodermic needles in her rooms, and that Dr. Christian Hanson, a chiropractor, and Miss Rennie, Mrs. Lydig's nurse, had both told him that the woman was a confirmed victim of drugs.

The butler told of her engagement to the late minister, Dr. Percy Stickney Grant:

Perhaps the most startling of the butler's testimony, in view of the alleged financial condition of the woman who employed him, was his statement that she had recently bought two chinchilla coats worth thousands of dollars, and a chest of silver valued at $10,000.

"She told me she was getting $40,000 a year," said the butler.

TWO BARGES CAUGHT IN GALE TOWED INTO PORT

A sudden veering of the gale lashing the Atlantic coast today snatched from the jaws of death the 16 sailors who for 20 hours were marooned on four coal barges which were separated from their towing tug, off Provincetown.

The barges were in momentary danger of slipping from their anchor chains and crashing on the shoals near Highland Light. Two Coast Guard cruisers stood helplessly by during the night, while on shore a valiant band of Coast Guardsmen stood by, ready to rescue the men from the roaring surf, if possible, should the slender anchor chains snap.

The gale was roaring out of the east-northeast and hope for the men aboard the barges had almost been abandoned when the wind suddenly shifted to the north.

This brought calmer seas, and shortly before noon tugs managed to pass cables to two of the stranded barges and tow them safely to Provincetown. Later it was planned to tow the other barges into the harbor.

The barges were being towed from Portland, Me., to New York by the tug Gettysburg. The barges and tug are owned by the Reading Railroad.

60 SAVED FROM FIRE PERIL IN BACK BAY

When fire broke out on the first floor of the four-story apartment building at No. 21 Astor street, Back Bay, today, enough heroes were in the vicinity to assist to safety the 60 men women and children trapped in the building by smoke and flames.

Dense billows of smoke poured through the hallways, while the flames, burning about the first-floor stairway made escape difficult.

William McNerney, who was in the neighborhood, rushed in and carried out Miss Lillian Allen, 24, who occupies a second floor apartment. McNerney returned to the second floor and carried out Dorothy Mayhew aged 12.

On the third floor Dorris Pike, 8 and her brother William, 7, were aided to safety by others of the rescuers. Patrolman John Connell of any time tomorrow is not as bright as it as before we got the latest reports on the movements of this storm centre, which is heading directly for the Grand Banks."

Announcement was made today that a fourth man will travel in the transatlantic monoplane America on its ocean flight, and that the man will be Bernt Balchen, former lieutenant in the Norwegian navy.

"I decided to take a fourth man," Commander Richard E. Byrd, who is in charge of the expedition, announced, "to demonstrate that such a number can be carried on a transoceanic trip.

"I should like to call this fourth man a passenger, but Balchen is so useful that in effect, at least, he will be an important member of the crew. He deserves to go along because of all the help he has given us and because he has proved himself to be a man."

HERO OF POLAR HUNT.

Lieutenant Balchen is an experienced pilot, navigator and mechanic. He came into wide notice in 1925, when he flew over the Arctic wastes in search of the missing expedition headed by Roald Amundsen. Last year he was a member of Amundsen's North Pole expedition in the airship Norge, being stationed at Spitzbergen.

There Balchen became friendly with Commander Byrd, who was getting ready for his Polar flight in the Miss Josephine Ford, and after Byrd had flown over the Pole he brought Balchen back to this country.

Balchen became a member of the flying staff of the Fokker airplane staff at Teterboro and it was he who made the final tests on the America and flew it from New Jersey to Roosevelt Field, where it was officially turned over to Byrd.

During the month of preparation here Balchen has been constantly about the hangar, aiding in many ways. Byrd said today that Balchen would probably be called on during the flight to act as navigator while he takes his turn at the controls to relieve Bert Acosta, the flight pilot.

WILL TAKE FIRST AIR MAIL.

Balchen also promises to be of assistance to George Noville, flight engineer, because of Balchen's long experience with airplane engines.

The first official American air mail will be taken on the plane when Byrd hops off.

While the America today remained earth-bound because of continued stormy conditions over the Atlantic, Grover A. Whalen, vice-president of the American Transoceanic Company, sponsors of the flight, announced that Postmaster General New has designated the plane as an official mail carrier.

Ceremonies at which Postmaster John Kiely of New York offered a mail pilot's license to Commander Byrd were arranged for this afternoon. The America's mail closed at 10 o'clock last night.

Clarence D. Chamberlin and Charles A. Levine, respectively pilot and passenger in the transatlantic flight of the Bellanca monoplane, Columbia, carried mail across the ocean, although the move did not have the sanction of the postoffice department to do so.

The stamps were cancelled by the Hempstead, L. I., postmaster. Postmaster General New later called upon the Hempstead postmaster for explanation of the transaction and a detailed report was later sent to Washington.

Hands off on ∾ John Bull Trying ∾ To 'Bull' Uncle Sam

HERE'S HOW IT WILL BE IF SAMMY HAS HIS WAY

If agreed to by the participating powers, Great Britain and Japan, the British and American navies eventually will be of the same size, ship for ship, class for class, and that of Japan will be of the ratio 3 to 5. For practical purposes, the American proposal established four classes of ships to be dealt with in the proposed new treaty, which is to be supplemental to the Washington treaty. These classes were: the cruiser class, the destroyer class, the submarine class, and an exempt class that includes all other types, such as supply ships, tenders, mine-sweepers, etc.

DRUG SECRET OF MRS. LYDIG

shortly after the bankruptcy proceedings began, Johnson said. She is now living in an expensive three-room suite at the Hotel Drake on Park avenue, and embloys a maid, a nurse and a chauffeur, he declared.

Q.—Did Mrs. Lydig ever get an allowance from Dr. Grant? A.—No.

Q.—Did she live with Dr. Grant? A.—She did, at Bedford Hills.

Mrs. Lydig went there in the Spring of 1921, said Johnson. As her butler, he accompanied her and was in her service at Dr. Grant's house until she left, he said, on December 31, that year.

"She spent a lot of money to improve the place," Johnson testified. "Some $60,000, the contractors told me. Then she bought a lot of furniture for the house, but took part of it away when she left. This she later sold at auction."

Johnson said he was told that the chinchilla coats were worth from $25,000 to 30,000 each. In November, 1926, he said, Mrs. Lydig had him remove three chests of silver from the Manhattan Storage Warehouse, but another chest is still there.

Just before the last Christmas holidays, Jonnson said, he left Mrs. Lydig's employ. He was at the Murray Hill Hospital for a few days, when he was told by a physician that he need not return to Mrs. Lydig's house.

It was stated that if these chinchilla coats and the silver are seized by the creditors it will be possible to settle all debts in full.

Elsie Janis Going With Legion, "I Hope to Tell You"

Chicago, June 21 (I.N.S.).—Elsie Janis was speeding West today following a brief stopover in Chicago. She is enroute from New York to Beverly Hills, Cal., for a rest.

The famous "doughboy's sweetheart" was asked if she were going to make the trip to Paris with the American Legion. "I hope to tell you," she said.

TWO WOMEN GET JAIL TERMS IN NARCOTIC CASE

When four defendants in narcotic cases were called for trial in Middlesex Superior Criminal Court today, two of the defendants, John Perkins and his wife Lucy, of Livermore place, Cambridge, failed to appear and were defaulted. The other two, Mary Lee and Frances M. Parrott, were found guilty. The former was sentenced to 18 months in the House of Correction and the latter was given three months in the same institution.

TUGS SAVE TWO BARGES IN GALE

When off Provincetown the tow line parted as a result of the heavy seas which the gale kicked up. The 60-mile wind was rapidly carrying the barges on the shoals when the despairing crew members dropped the barge anchors. For a time these dragged before they finally bit deep enough to withstand the fury of the gale.

On shore the Coast Guard patrol immediately notified Boston and the two Coast Guard patrol bots were rushed to the scene. The tug Carlysle was also ordered from Boston, but the seas were too heavy for any attempt at passing lines to the imperilled barges.

Throughout the night the gale increased in fury and the helpless watchers on the Coast Guard vessels and on the shore practically gave up hope for the men. Earlier a power cutter had battled its way to the barges, but the men refused to leave their craft. Then came the veering of the wind and within a few hours the seas, while still running heavily, had lost the fury of a few hours before.

The tug Gettysburg, after much manoeuvering finally got a line aboard the barge Neshaminy, while at the same time the tug Carlysle managed to get a line to the crew of the barge Salem.

Boy and Girl Headed for N. Y. Stranded in Worcester

Worcester, June 21 (A.P.).—Norma Cannell, fourteen, who gives her address as No. 132 Hudson street, Somerville, and who says she is a student in the Northeastern Junion High School, that city, and Albert Woodworth, fifteen, of No. 86 Hudson street, Somerville, were arrested here today as runaways.

Penniless, they decided at 10:30 last night, after attending a movie show, to go to New York. They were given a ride to Belmont, where they slept in the woods until daybreak, when they started for the metropolis.

They were exhausted when arrested, having eaten nothing since last night.

QUIRK FACES $500,000 SUIT, SAYS POLA NEGRI

Los Angeles, June 21 (I.N.S.).—Lines were drawn today for a legal battle between Pola Negri and her new husband, Serge Mdivini, and James R. Quirk, publisher of a motion picture magazine, over the legality of Mdivini's title of Prince of Georgia.

Quirk faces a $500,000 damage suit unless he retracts the statement in his magazine that Pola's husband is not really a prince, the actress declared. Quirk declares he will neither apologize nor retract.

CONFER TODAY ON CROSSINGS

The campaign of the Boston Evening American to bring about the elimination of deathtrap railroad crossings today bore fruit when the Public Utilities commissioners and Commissioner of Public Works William F. Williams met in conference at the State House to consider methods of additional crossing safeguards.

That the members of the Utilities Commission are "in hearty accord with increasing the protection" was volunteered by Chairman Henry C. Attwill.

Commissioner Williams renewed his offer to meet the roads half way in a co-operative safety scheme. He is ready to put up additional warning signs and blinkers on the highways near the crossings, at the State's expense.

As the Utilities Commission has jurisdiction over the railroads, Commissioner Williams expressed confidence that his plan will be accepted.

In fact the commissioner is hopeful, he said, that in protective methods, Massachusetts will become the model for other States to copy.

Lowell Man Hangs Himself

Lowell, June 21.—Despondent because of an extended illness, Charles H. Campbell, seventy-three, of Hildreth street, committed suicide today by hanging to a beam at his home. His wife discovered the body.

U. S. Third in Navy Ratio, Japs Lead, on Envoys' Ages

Geneva, June 21 (I.N.S.).—One of the statisticians at the Tripartite Conference today jokingly suggested to Admiral Saito that he propose a ratio for auxiliary ships, according to the ages of the chief delegates.

Admiral Saito is 70, the Hon. W. C. Bridgeman 62 and Hugh Gibson 43.

This would mean a ratio of 7—6—4, with Japan leading and the United States a bad third.

ARKANSAS MAKING SPEED TEST IN MAINE

Rockland, June 21 (A. P.)—Facing a stiff wind, the battleship Arkansas today was having a series of official speed trials on the Rockland measured mile course. Beginning with 10 knots the speed was to be gradually increased to 21.

The Arkansas has been modernized at a cost of $3,000,000 and now uses oil for fuel in place of coal. She leaves tomorrow morning for two days' fuel consumption tests and an endurance run to Provincetown, Mass. The craft will be at Boston until July 6.

U. S., BRITAIN SPLIT ON NAVY CUT OFFERS

wholly unacceptable to the United States. The more closely they were examined today by naval exerts here the more unsatisfactory they became.

Japan's proposals, being somewhat vague, are not understood in Washington. Japan apparently is insisting upon a ratio of auxiliary ships greater than that allowed to her in capital ships under the 1921 agreement. This, of course, is unsatisfactory to the United States.

It is upon the British proposals, however, that naval experts have centered their attention.

The evidences of Anglo-American understanding and agreement that were so marked in Washington five years ago apparently are absent at Geneva, for the British program conflicts with the American proposals at nearly every vital point.

U. S. OFFER SIMPLE.

The American proposition simply suggests the application of the 5-5-3 ratio to all auxiliary naval craft. It is the essence of simplicity—and, from the American standpoint, eminently fair to all concerned, in view of the fact that both powers already have subscribed to the justice of the 5-5-3 ratio as applied to capital ships.

Against this, however, the British have advanced a series of cleverly devised proposals which not only aim at re-opening the Washington treaty, but would make well nigh incalculable changes in present-day naval construction.

The heart of the British program lies in the proposal that cruisers be limited to 7,500 tons and that guns be reduced from 8-inch to 6-inch. All of the newer American cruisers, built and building, are 10,000 tons and bear 8-inch guns.

Cruisers of limited operating radius while entirely suitable to Great Britain, with her naval bases circling the world, would be tragedy for America, whose naval bases are few and far between.

Also, Britain has a huge mercantile fleet, with dozens of ships capable of mounting 6-inch armament in case of war. A merchant ship will not readily take an 8-inch gun.

The American delegates at Geneva have the same ace-in-the-hole that Charles E. Hughes played in the Washington conference. That is the ability of the United States to out-build any navy in the world. A veiled hint of this was thrown out by Gibson in his opening speech.

President Coolidge last session, although preventing the "big navy" advocates from putting through a ten-cruiser program, was not successful in preventing the authorization of four new cruisers.

"If the Geneva Conference fails, I am certain Congress will authorize ten new cruisers," said Representative Britten (R.) of Illinois, ranking member of the Naval Affairs Committe, today.

Geneva, June 21.—Proposals for the extension of naval disarmament, as set forth at the tripartite conference by Great Britain the United States and Japan, were today turned over to the technicians for study.

Leaders formed an executive committee and organized a large technical committee to begin work studying the proposals immediately. The executive committee will meet on Friday.

Admiral Viscount Saito, head of the Japanese delegation, was very outspoken today in declaring that Japan will never accept a 5-5-3 ratio for auxiliary ships, a proposal which France and Italy already had rejected at the Washington conference.

SITTIN' QUITE HIGH!

EX-CONVICT IS HELD AS 'FAGIN'

SUSPECT TAKEN INTO CUSTODY AT GUN POINT

A graduate of Dannemora, Massachusetts State Prison, Concord Reformatory and other institutions, yet looking like a college professor, Walter L. Burgess, man of parts, alleged "Fagin," was arrested at the point of a gun by Special Officer Arthur Tiernan today as he, the "professor," inquired at a South End rooming house for the whereabouts of his "pupils."

The pupils were Mr. and Mrs. Charles V. Foley, held in $10,000 each when arraigned in Brighton district court today charged with breaking and entering the home of David Ansin in Chiswick road, Brighton.

Burgess was searched as Tiernan put him under arrest and a loaded revolver taken from him. He was taken to headquarters and after an hour's questioning admitted his identity and parts of his record. Police say he has directed the operations of a youthful gang of criminals.

Six feet tall, white haired, dressed immaculately, Burgess admitted that he was the "neighbor" who escaped Brighton police last Saturday when he and Charles Foley were caught in the Ansin home.

He escaped by telling one of the officers that he was only a "neighbor" who had "come over to see what was going on." Since then Brighton police have been on his trail and information furnished by Captain Anderson led to his arrest.

According to police, he confessed that his "racket" was to look over the lay of the land in wealthy homes. His means of entrance was as a salesman for toilet articles.

DANCE DARLING COUNTESS NOW

SHUFFLE ALONG COLORED GIRL IS BRIDE

The world's first brown-skin countess is America's, according to dispatches from Paris today, which declare that long-legged Josephine Baker, the "comedy chorusgirl" of "Shuffle Along" in the Hub a couple of years ago, has shuffled herself into possession of a real count.

"If you haven't been vamped by a brown skin, you haven't been vamped at all," the "dancing darling" used to sing at the end of the shuffling line of belles.

She sang it to Count Pepito di Albertini of Rome, over in Paris where she has won fame and fortune, as well as stardom in a white show, and the nuptials occurred last June 3, which oJsephine says was her 21st birthday.

Pepito is a real count, gosh darn it, according to jigging Josephine, because she looked him up thoroughly and found that he was solid all the way and had a lot of coats of arms and everything. Also he's got a great big family.

St. Louis, where her father is a drummer in a negro theatre, and Harlem in the dusky belt of New York were said today to be awaiting eagerly the triumphal black bottoming back home of joyful Josephine with her new attache.

She was practically unknown in both these centres—as well as all others—two years ago. She was just finishing up with a show, the "Chocolate Dandies," and had been in a few other "honky-tonks."

Then she joined "Shuffle Along" and because of her vivacity was put on the end of the dancing line, where her spontaneous steps each performance finally developed into a feature of the show.

Then she shuffled along rapidly into fame.

AT TOP OF POLE TO BEAT KELLY'S LONG RECORD

A local edition of Alvin "Shipwreck" Kelly, champion flagpole sitter, in the person of "Sparrow" Holl of Framingham, today mounted the flagpole of the Metropolitan Building, Tremont street, there to remain for fourteen days in an effort to break the record of the famous "Shipwreck."

"How are you going to sleep?" he was asked. "By twining my arms around the ropes of my bos'n's chair," he replied.

"What are you going to eat—and how?" was the next question. "Soup, malted milk and maybe coffee. My attendant will send it up to me on a rope elevator," he answered.

RUSH TO PROP UP TOPPLING BUILDING

A menace to hundreds of school children in the Abraham Lincoln School, a condemned three-story brick building at Fayette and Arlington streets today threatened to collapse. A score of city workmen were rushed to the scene and the toppling structure anchored with heavy cables and huge pilings.

Two cracks 10 feet long and more than an inch in width appeared in the walls of the building before noon. Police were notified and the Arlington street bridge, close by, was barred to traffic. School children were notified to keep out of Fayette street and away from the dangerous area.

The building has been unoccupied for some time. It was condemned by the building commissioner last week. Police feared the building, if it toppled, might crash on top of a train passing by. The vibration from the train, they said, might be enough to start the collapse.

Powerful steel cables were rigged through the windows of the building and made fast to piling set about the structure.

Fillmore Flaggens comes from the famous Rumbolt branch of Flaggens.

Recently Fillmore was asked why he preferred Chelmsford.

"The goods are all in the bottle not on it," replied the man who knows most of the good things in New England. "You can't drink tinfoil successfully nor can you eat glass, so why pay for them. Chelmsford buys the bottles back and it doesn't worry about the tinfoil — nor do I."

"There's another point, I can get Chelmsford almost everywhere in the good hotels and restaurants, at grocers, drugstores and roadside stands and when I ask for Chelmsford I'm getting something more than just "ginger ale!"

CHAMBERLIN'S SCHOOL DAYS RECALLED

By HOMER H. GRUENTHER

As a student, Clarence Chamberlin, who crossed the Atlantic in the Bellanca plane, lays claim to no honors. Neither do his parents for him. From kindergarten to his graduating year in high school Clarence showed a particular dislike for "reading, riting and rithmetic."

However, after he graduated from high school he was given a chance to select his own studies, and when he went to State College at Ames, Iowa, he took up electrical engineering, studying both the practical as well as the theoretical side of electricity and its secrets.

Chamberlin's mother remembers well the many times when she had to call the teacher in the mornings to see whether her son had gone to school, or whether he had gone to his muskrat traps along the river, which he frequently did.

PLAYED "HOOKIE."

As for Latin, Greek and the classical courses, Clarence was lost, but when it came to figures he was able to stand at the head of the class, and in manual training classes, his grades were always between 90 and 100 per cent. He was also good in history.

But playing "hookie" from school was about the worst fault Clarence had. His parents who are stern English folks, had always forbidden their only son, to smoke or swear, and when the time came they forbade him to drink.

As a result, all through his life, he has always insisted that he has never drunk intoxicating liquors, has never made it a practice to swear, and has never taken a "chew" in his life.

It was on account of this that his mother registered considerable surprise when she learned that her son had asked for a glass of beer and a hot dog, when he landed in Berlin.

SURPRISES MOTHER.

"Clarence is old enough to know what he is doing," said his mother, "but he never did take a drink in this country, besides I do not think German beer is very strong, and it will not hurt him if he does drink a little of it. Of course, in France," she said, "the liquor is a little stronger but I know he will be careful."

Despite Chamberlin's dislike for studies he managed to hold his own with his classmates and did not fail in a single year. His worst fault in grade schools was teasing the girls.

"Jimmy" Hughes, his bosom friend, remembers one instance when Chamberlin had teased the sister of one of the bigger boys, and a battle was the result. It was one of those back alley "kid affairs," where black eyes and bloody noses are numerous, but where no one gets badly injured.

As far as his school mates can remember, this was Clarence's first fight, but he managed to come off with flying colors, and after that he was quite a respected youngster.

PASSED UP TEAM CHANCES.

While Clarence was still in grade school the monicker of "Chink" was attached to him, and even now no one around Denison, Ia., knows him by the name Clarence. They all talk about "Chink," saying "I knew Chink could do it."

At Ames College, an attempt was made to get "Chink" to come out for athletics. He was a little too small to play football, but in his activities in gymnasium playing basketball, and later on the track, he displayed considerable talent.

But as he got older, he grew more bashful, and he refused to get interested in any sport enough to make an effort to get on the college team.

LINDY'S FEAT LEADS TO MANY OCEAN FLIGHTS

(By the Associated Press)

Numerous ocean flights are now being planned as the result of the successful journeys across the Atlantic made by Charles A. Lindbergh, Clarence D. Chamberlin and Charles A. Levine.

Some of the flights, however, were planned before Lindbergh and Chamberlin started theirs.

Commander Richard E. Byrd, who flew over the North Pole, will fly from New York to Paris as soon as the weather permits. He will have three men with him.

The Navy Department at Washington has announced that there is a possibility that the dirigible Los Angeles may attempt a flight from Lakehurst, N. J., its home port, to Honolulu.

Lieutenants Lester J. Maitland and Albert Hagenberger, army pilots, have announced they will attempt a San Francisco-Honolulu flight within three weeks.

B. H. Griffin, of Oklahoma City, is expected to hop off on the same flight the latter part of July.

Lieutenant Carl Ben Eielson, former navy pilot, has entered the proposed Seattle-to-Tokio flight, for which a prize of $25,000 has been offered.

Ernest L. Smith, air mail pilot, has announced that he expects to hop off from San Francisco within ten days for a flight to Honolulu.

PLAN LONG SEA JUMPS.

Captain Frank Malkovsky and Lieutenant Ludwid Pavlovsky, Czecho-Slovakian airmen, have declared their intention of flying from Prague to New York.

Captain Robert H. MacIntosh and Lieutenant-Colonel F. F. Minchin, British Imperial Airway fliers, have announced their intention of attempting a flight from London to New York the first week in August.

Otto Koennecke, German aviator and war ace, is planning a Berlin to San Francisco hop. Ernest Udet, another noted German aviator, was reported seeking a suitable plane for an air voyage to New York and return during the summer.

It was announced at Dallas, that two fliers would take off July 23 for the Dallas-to-Hong Kong flight, with stops at San Francisco, Hawaii and the Philippines, with Hong Kong being reached in 144 hours to win a $25,000 prize. The fliers were Lieutenants Ben Stern and Jess Windham, of Memphis.

AROUND-THE-WORLD DASH.

Captain E. L. Janney, Canadian ace, is expected to hop off June 30 for a flight from Ottawa to London.

The National Aeronautical Association has approved plans for a New York-Spokane flight to start September 20.

K. Ando, Japanese airman, has announced his intention of attempting Tokyo-Seattle flight during the Summer. He would use a seaplane.

W. T. Ward, Brooklyn aviator, has been working on plans for a Brooklyn-Tokyo flight during the Summer.

Adrien Remy, French constructor of hydrogliders, has announced his intention to cross the Atlantic, probably during the Summer. He plans to start from Cherbourg and land in New York.

Linton O. Wells, newspaperman, and Lieutenant Leigh Wade, aviator, have been reported as contemplating an attempt to fly around the world in 15 days.

Lindbergh Stamp Rush Equals Christmas Week

Lindbergh air mail stamps placed on sale in the main postoffice today caused a rush of early morning business equalled only by that of Christmas. It was predicted that the 100,000 stamps allotted to the district would be sold before night.

Bankers, clerks and shopgirls vied with each other for places in the long lines of buyers and emergency windows were opened to accommodate the increasing throngs.

The stamp is the first ever issued in commemoration of a living American, according to Postmaster Baker.

It pictures Lindbergh's plane, the "Spirit of St. Louis," in the centre, with the Atlantic coast of the United States and Canada on the left and the course of the flight to Paris.

LINDY TO QUIT SPOTLIGHT AS WORLD HERO

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON
International News Service Staff Correspondent

St. Louis, Mo., June 21.—Eager to return to the ranks as a private citizen, Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh today sought to abandon the spotlight as a world hero.

The "lone eagle" will postpone his contemplated aerial tour of the country for several weeks and probably until late in July. In the meantime, he will devote himself to negotiating the first steps of a business career, to writing a book of his transatlantic flight and to seeking rest as an ordinary mortal.

Lindbergh will decline temporarily all invitations from a clamorous and adoring public for personal appearances, it was said, with two possible exceptions.

He was reported favorably inclined toward an early acceptance of an invitation from the Canadian government for a visit to America's northern neighbor. It was said he also felt he should visit Dayton, Ohio, because all airmen look upon that city—the home of the Wrights—as the "birthplace of aviation."

The air hero will leave St. Louis tomorrow or Thursday for the East, presumably to visit Washington and New York. While in the national capital, he will confer with government officials over the invitation of the Canadian government and with navy officers concerning the technical aspects of his transatlantic flight.

He hopes to fly East in the "Spirit of St. Louis," to show the public how easy it is to commute in a plane across half the country.

Spanish Heir and Sister Are Sorely Afflicted

Biarritz, June 21 (A.P.).—The health of the Prince of Asturias, heir to the Spanish throne, has taken a turn for the worse during the last few days, say reports from Spain. His condition now is such that he has to remain in bed.

The Prince's illness is reflected in a reported decision of the King and Queen to delay their scheduled trip to England.

Princess Beatrice, sister of the Crown Prince, is reported to be suffering from an infection on her arm, which is not healing as quickly as expected and is causing much anxiety to the royal family.

26 Boys Off to London Camp

Among 168 passengers on the Furness liner Nova Scotia, sailing today for Liverpool via Halifax, N. S., and St. John's N. F., were twenty-six private school boys en route to the Pickwick travel camp at East bourne, near London.

PASTOR SCORES HERRICK'S WINE TOAST TO LINDY

Lima, N. Y., June 21 (I.N.S.).—A bitter denunciation of American Ambassador Myron C. Herrick for his reputed action in serving champagne at an American embassy dinner in Paris given in honor of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, was voiced today by Bishop Adna Wright Leonard of Buffalo, speaking at the commencement exercises at the Genesee Wesleyan Seminary here.

The Methodist Episcopal bishop was particularly incensed over the reported proffer of champagne to Lindbergh by Ambassador Herrick with which the young airman was said to have been asked to drink a toast to his mother.

ATTORNEY FRACTURES LEG IN COURTHOUSE FALL

Attorney George A. Drury, law partner of Judge Webster Thayer, slipped while descending the stairs leading from the courthouse today at Pemberton square, sustaining a fracture of the left leg, which caused his removal to the Haymarket Relief Hospital. Attorney Drury is fifty-nine.

MEDAL FOR DEAN OF ALL HUB REPORTERS

Jurisprudence, with which he has been associated in the Hub for fifty-nine years, turned on genial "Judge" Hutchins of the Boston Evening American at last and bit him at the Parker House.

He was worried and harassed for more than three hours at a testimonial dinner given him by newspaper associates on the anniversary of his eighty-first birthday.

Weston F. Hutchins, dean of all Boston reporters, slid past such a birthday, but you'd need the full bench—all of whom he pre-dates in service—to prove it.

The "Judge," a Civil War veteran, a reporter who, with Charles A. Dana of the old New York Sun, fought the Sioux Indians in the far West during the run of the first passenger train over the fresh-laid rails of the Union Pacific Railroad, was the bashful recipient of two medals during the testimonial given him by his associates during the past years, many of whom were not even born twenty years after he had set up records as a warrior and a journalist.

RECEIVES MEDAL.

From A. J. Philpot of the Boston Globe, toastmaster, Hutchins received a "Medal of Valor" from the Veteran Journalists' Association, and from his friends gathered at the dinner he received another medal also for valor and for his long span of attainment.

Speeches were made—and they were brief, as befits a newspapermen's gathering—by a dozen or more of the gathering, including Rupert Chute of the Boston Transcript, also a Civil War veteran.

At the testimonal dinner, in addition to those mentioned, were District Attorney William J. Foley, Nathaniel F. Nichols, brother of the Mayor; Fernald Hutchins, son of the reporter.

Robert J. Gillis, city editor of the Boston Evening American; Walter Kane, Bert Ford, John Noonan, Alan Fraser, Ruth Mugglebee, Arthur Quinn and Paul Whelton of the American; W. D. Sullivan, managing editor of the Boston Globe and Lucien H. Thayer, Ben Wright, John Barry, John Cadigan, George M. Dimond and Arthur A. Fowle of the Globe.

MAYOR SENDS FLOWERS.

Fred Brine, Bert Brockbank, Sidney Cook, Eddie Druan and William J. Putnam of the Boston Herald.

Harold Wheeler, managing editor of the Boston Traveler; Howard Gould, city editor of the Traveler, and Charles Lee, Charles O'Malley and Al Watts of the Traveler, Ernest Jackson, former police reporter on the Boston Post, and Fuller Morgan.

Mayor Nichols, who was out of town, sent a personal letter to "Judge" Hutchins and a basket of flowers to the diners to be presented to the veteran courthouse reporter, who, at the urging of the gathering, described some few of his experiences in the 59 years since he first began to direct a soft-lead pencil over a wad of paper.

MANY COUNTRY GIRLS SEEK FOOT PRIZES

Miss Cinderella of 1927 may be chosen from along Main street, in New Hampshire or Vermont, instead of from a throbbing thoroughfare in Boston or some other city.

Country competition has begun to crowd the city entrants in the Boston Evening American's New England Perfect Foot Contest, so that each increasing mail convinces the Contest Editor that his quest will have sought out the fair ones in all six States.

With the greater difficulties the avalanche of answers to his invitation imposes, the Contest Editor finds, too, that his selection will be really representative. The entries have come from city and country in every nook and corner of New England, with still nine days remaining of the contest.

The first prize will consist of more than the title to New England's perfect feet. The Kid Tanners' gold medal and $100 in gold will be given to the lucky title holder with as beautiful a pair of kidskin shoes as it is possible to make.

Twenty-four other prizes will be awarded, four of gold with stylish shoes and the other 20 of shoes alone.

The Contest Editor will be assisted in his selection of the prize winners by experienced anatomists whose life long study and care of the human feet have made their opinion authoritative.

There is only one rule to the New England Perfect Foot Contest. Just this: Send a photograph of your feet with your name and address to the Editor of the Boston Evening American Perfect Foot Contest.

Hundreds have already sent their photographs. Thousands more are expected before the close of the contest, June 30.

It will be an honor indeed to be chosen as the proud possessor of New England's perfect feet. Maybe you deserve it. Submit a photograph and see.

INVENTOR OF LOOSE LEAF BOOK DROWNED

Duluth, Minn., June 21 A.P.).—John B. Irving, millionaire president of the Irving-Pitt Manufacturing Company of Kansas City, met his death when a canoe in which he had started on a fishing trip near his 400-acre estate on the St. Croix overturned.

A salesman's need for a loose leaf notebook into which one could insert or take out pages of prices was the idea that brought Mr. Irving his fortune.

BEBE DANIELS WILL STAR IN AIR FILM

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

LOS ANGELES, June 21.—Bebe Daniels is going to be the first woman to cross the Pacific Ocean in an aeroplane. Lindbergh has given her an idea for a aviatrix who wins the plaudits of her countrymen and also saves herself from a lot of doctors who tell her she can only live six months.

Bebe Daniels

The story is to be called "Sky High." Of course you knew even without my explanation that Bebe's flight is only in celluloid, although she is willing to fly to Hawaii in the trans-Pacific race if Lieutenant Lester Maitland will take her. I can tell Bebe, however, she hasn't much chance. Lieutenant Maitland was the pilot in the giant Fokker in which I made my journey to San Francisco. He isn't keen about women passengers. In fact, I suspect if Assistant Secretary of War Trubee Davison, his superior officer, had not invited me, I would still be standing in Clover Field.

But, anyhow, I hope Lieutenant Maitland, who has announced his decision of flying to Hawaii, wins the race. He is a brave lad, and as a pilot, they tell me, the army has none better. Bebe's Miss Lindbergh tale has been copyrighted and registered with the Hays office. In case any other ambitious comediennes like the story, they had better take my advice and lay off. She may make it following "Swim, Girl, Swim."

WHAT a thrill in the thought that Robert Flaherty has been signed by the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to direct "White Shadows of the South Seas," the next Cosmopolitan production. Flaherty is the boy who made "Nanook of the North," and brought it to New York absolutely unheralded and unknown.

It made all the hard boiled critics sit up and realize that the half had not been done with motion pictures. After "Nanook of the North," Flaherty was sent to the South Seas by Famous Players-Lasky. He spent two years there, and returned with "Moana of the South Seas," a story in which the natives themselves were the principal characters.

Now Flaherty will have a big story for "White Shadows of the South Seas" which to my mind is one of the best stories ever written. What a picture it should make!

IT seems to be the feeling that the next year will see England more to the front as a producer of motion pictures than ever before. Tremendous effort is being brought forward to advance the motion picture industry on the British Isles.

Film visitors of that country return with tales of huge sums being invested, all with the hope that one day we shall get some worthy English made films.

Henry Victor, who has been seen in many of our American pictures, left Saturday for New York where he will sail immediately for home. While his trip to London at this time is in the nature of a vacation, there is the possibility that he may remain and make several pictures.

BABY IN VALISE SAVES HIS LIFE BY CRYING

New York, June 21 (A.P.)—A ten-day-old baby boy was found in a valise which had been checked by his mother in the baggage room of the Grand Central Station early today and prompt action by a clerk saved his life.

The clerk heard muffled wails issuing from the valise a few moments after it had been checked by a well-dressed, slender, dark-complexioned woman about 25 years old.

At first the clerk, Fred Trubee, thought someone was trying to "get rid of a cat." The valise was pried open and the clerk was astonished to find the baby, with a wad of cotton partly stuffed in his mouth.

The foundling was taken to the Bellevue Hospital, where physicians soon had him cooing.

BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON SOCIETY

Porcellian Club Members Entertain Today at Beck Hall Tea; Likely the Last of Such Events

SOME THIRTY-FIVE SMART YOUNG MEN OF HARVARD, members of the Porcellian Club, entertain today as usual at the "Beck Hall Tea." The affair, also as usual, is "the" affair of Harvard Class Day. But today's tea takes on a significance quite all its own. The Porcellian men of 1927 are writing a finis to the "Beck Hall Teas" (as they have been known in social parlance), and another year, in all probability, the exclusive young collegians of Porcellian brand must needs entertain their friends and sweethearts in a different enclosure than Beck's.

FOR BECK AS A HARVARD HALL GOES INTO THE DISCARD, to succumb before the march of utility and progress as have other Harvard institutions (the mythical "Gold Coast" among them). For the last time Porcellian Club guests will sup and dance in the sacred enclosure flanked by the Baptist Church's slender spire and Beck's brownstone walls. Architecturally Beck is not a gem. It had its being when brownstone was ultra. Beck's fame is a thing apart from period and design, and has to do with its gold encrusted history when sons of millionaires and multi-millionaires lived their college lives in the same rooms their fathers had occupied before them.

SOME OF THE YOUNG MEN WHOSE NAMES ARE ON THIS year's Beck Hall tea list are: Harold Jefferson Coolidge and Lawrence Coolidge, Robert Haydock Hallowell, James Handasyd Perkins, John Dudley Clark, Jr., John Randolph Burke, Richard Frothingham O'Neil, Richard Sanders Scott, George Higginson, William Phillips Graves, Jr., James Holland Beal, Nathaniel Hamlen, John Randolph Harrison, Henry Longfellow deRham, Austin Lamont, William A. N. Burden. Which indicates an attendance by Upper Tendom of Boston, New York and Philadelphia.

JOHN RANDOLPH HARRISON, OF SHORT HILLS, N. J., IS THE young collegian in charge of the Porcellian tea. His special guests for the tea and Class Day celebrations are his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bernard J. Harrison. Mrs. Harrison was Jane Randolph. Mr and Mrs. Harold J. Coolidge and their daughter, Miss Emily, came in on the Samaria yesterday just in time for the festivities. The Higginsons figure prominently since George Higginson, 2d, is a host and his brother-in-law, Barrett Wendell, Jr., is one of the mighty in Harvard's 1902 Reunion week.

TOMORROW THE FREDERICK STRONG MOSELEY FAMILY OF Boston and Newburyport depart for New York and the marriage celebration on Thursday of young Mr. Frederick Moseley, Jr., and Miss Elizabeth Jane Hamilton Brady, daughter of James Cox Brady. Miss Helen Moseley, a sister of the bridegroom-elect, is to attend the bride at the altar, and so goes over somewhat in advance of the family to have certain last momen' tryings-on of bridal finery.

MR. MOSELEY GAVE HIS FAREWELL DINNER LAST FRIDAY evening at the Harvard Club over in New York, while the series of brilliant parties for the bride and the entire wedding group continues right up to and through the wedding eve itself. Mrs. James Cox Brady is hostess at that time for a large dance, and is hostess for the Moseley family. That the alliance brings to Boston such a charming addition to the young matron set as the future Mrs. Moseley, Jr., will be is a matter of much rejoicing at the Brady home.

ACCORDING TO LETTERS FROM EUROPE THE LOUIS E. VOSE family—Mr. and Mrs. Vose, Miss Nancy Vose and Miss Phyllis Vose—have a wonderful Summer ahead of them. They plan to motor hither and yon about the Continent, through France, Italy and Switzerland, go to Vienna and the Balkans, and then across to England for a tour. Miss Nancy and her father also include Norway and Sweden in their itinerary. Such a long program may indicate that Mrs. Vose will return in the Autumn with Miss Phyllis for the beginning of the school term at Miss May's and that pater and elder sister will stay over for a while. Miss Nancy Vose came out two or three years ago, and Miss Phyllis has that thrilling experience in store for another year.

LARGESS IN THE WAY OF RICH MUSEUM PIECES CONTINUE to arrive at the Museum of Fine Arts "as the gift of" this and that highly-placed Bostonian. Many appear frequently as benefactors of the Museum, notably Mrs. Guy Lowell, Mrs. Edward Scott Fitz and Mrs. Edwin Farnham Greene. The latter has recently presented a watercolor by Maurice Prendergast, and to the long list of which Mrs. Fitz is donor is added "Portrait of a Man." Mrs. Guy Lowell's gift is particularly interesting—a charcoal portrait of the late Mr. Lowell by John Singer Sargent.

IT WAS NOT SO VERY LONG AGO THAT MR. LOWELL, ARCHITECT of international renown, started out on the Great Adventure, and that his portrait by Sargent should hang in the Museum is specially appropriate, since he was its designer. The great portion of Boston's upper set keenly interested in the Museum's affairs are looking forward to an important occasion, the dedication of the new wing for Western Art. It promises to be a duplication of the unveiling of the John Singer Sargent frescoes, in numbers and interest.

ENTHUSIASTIC FOLLOWERS OF THE RACES ARE MR. AND MRS. EDWARD GRAY and their two daughters. The Country Club's two big days and the meeting at "Raceland" found them on hand, keenly interested in outcome. At Raceland Miss Helga Gray wore a fetching costume of rose beige, a wire transparent hat and a pleated frock, and Mrs. Gray was in gray crepe.

SURVEY NEEDS OF INFANTS

The Boston Floating Hospital has appointed an independent committee composed of ex-Governor Cox, Russell G. Fessenden, Joseph Lee, W. Rodman Peabody and Philip Stockton to make a thorough investigation in order to ascertain the work most needed among the infants of Boston and its vicinity, and to make the recommendations which will assist the trustees in planning the future.

The improvements in methods of feeding and the research work conducted by the Boston Floating Hospital, supplemented by the pasturization of milk and the general advance in medicine, has made it possible for the various agencies to educate the mothers to a better understanding of the needs of infants.

ASK COOLIDGE TO FARMERS' PICNIC

Rapid City, S. D., June 21 (A.P.).—The opportunity of seeing 10,000 farmers at one time has been opened to President Coolidge, and it has been indicated he will avail himself of the chance.

The farmers will assemble in Ardmore, S. D., nearly a hundred miles from Rapid City, July 16, for a picnic, an invitation for which has been presented to Mr. Coolidge by a delegation from the city. The farmers are expected to come from South Dakota, Nebraska and Wyoming.

MORE TRIPS PLANNED.

Should the President accept, he would see a large portion of the Black Hills territory this Summer since he has already decided to go in the Northern Hills for the Western celebration at Deadwood in August.

A trip to Belle Fourche, also to the North, for a roundup next month, is under consideration and the President has received an invitation to attend an Indian mimic war at the Pine Ridge Indian agency, 125 miles from here, south of the bad lands.

SHEFFIELD EXPECTED.

During the Summer Mr. Coolidge expects to receive a number of notable visitors at the game lodge. Ambassador Sheffield, who has returned from Mexico to attend the Yale commencement, is expected, and Governor-General Leonard Wood of the Philippines is on his way to South Dakota from Victoria, B. C., where he landed yesterday.

Opie Chambers, secretary of the Yankton, S. D., Chamber of Commerce, was the first guest of President Coolidge at the State Game Lodge, having had dinner with him last night.

PEACHES EARNS $36,000; 'NUFF, SAYS DADDY

Carmel, N. Y., June 21 (A.P.)—Edward West Browning believes "Peaches," his Cinderella wife, is earning enough money as a public entertainer to pay for her own legal battles.

In six affidavits filed in court in answer to his wife's plea for an additional $10,000 for legal fees, counsel for Browning alleges Mrs. Browning has earned more than $36,247 since April.

Mrs. Browning told the court she was "not in a position to financially prosecute" her appeal from the Supreme Court decision granting Browning a legal separation from her and denying her further allimony.

The affidavits filed on behalf of Mr. Browning aver she has $7,500 in several banks and theatrical contracts calling for $2,000 a week. In four instances, it is asserted, she received $1,500 for one evening's entertainment.

Browning in his affidavit asserts that "the mere fact that I am a man of wealth should not be a good reason for me to pay any allowance to an adverse party without sufficient legal reasons."

RAKE 100 YEARS OLD GIVEN HENRY FORD

The rake was presented to Mr. Ford by Angell and Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Taylor of South Sudbury and R. Nelson and D. W. Dunlavy of Cambridge went to North Scituate to accept the gift.

Miss Loomis won a cup for being champion drummer for Massachusetts.

MISS WHITNEY SAVED BECAUSE SHE IS OLD

Sacramento, Cal., June 21 (I.N.S.).—A pardon by Governor C. C. Young today saved Miss Anita Whitney, 60-year-old social service worker of Oakland and graduate of Wellesley College, from a penitentiary sentence for criminal syndicalism.

Seven years ago the Oakland woman was convicted of membership in the Communist Labor party.

Then began a State-wide campaign to bring about her pardon. Governor Young was deluged with letters asking him to review the case carefully. The present pardon followed the executive's investigation.

"To condemn her, at 60 years of age, to a felon's cell is unthinkable," Governor Young declared. "Whatever may be thought of the folly of her misdirected sympathies, her lifelong friendship for the unfortunate is ample proof that she is not a criminal in any sense of the word."

MOTHER OF TWO WINS COLLEGE DEGREE

A Dorchester mother whose two children are students at Boston Latin School will be awarded a Master of Arts degree tomorrow by Radcliffe College, a degree won by studying and attending lectures between household tasks.

She is Mrs. Anna Brenner of No. 6 Calder street. Next year she will take another course at Radcliffe.

Joel, her elder son, will be graduated from Latin School this week, and intends to enter Harvard.

Charles, the younger, is a junior at Boston Latin, and he, too, intends entering Harvard.

"Studying is my recreation. I can't sing, I can't play the piano and do the lovely things some people do. So I study," said Mrs. Brenner. "Before I was married I was a school teacher in East Boston."

HARVARD CLASS DAY KEEPS 700 SENIORS BUSY

preme question how best to instruct. And on this question the undergraduate has, from his immediate experience, certain inevitable sentiments.

"The university that endures touches most intimately the undergraduate that passes, and it is in securing this contact that a large university meets its characteristic difficulties.

"Specifically speaking, at Harvard there are gaps that require filling and closing. There are unsatisfactory intervals between those who teach and who are taught, that the undergraduate cannot but hope will be narrowed as time passes.

"But it is afforded me to offer to our administrators the heartiest congratulations of this class upon the energy with which they are resolving this problem."

The Class Day proceedings started today with a yard procession of black-gowned seniors from Hollis Hall to Appleton Chapel.

700 IN LINE.

There were 700 seniors in line, 135 of them under 21 years old, and the line was led by First Marshal Leo Francis Daly, varsity football star, with Second Marshal Clem Coady, football captain, and Third Marshal John Randolph Burke, as lieutenants.

The brief chapel services, conducted by the Rt. Rev. Charles H. Brent, bishop of western New York, and with prayer by the Rev. Professor Edward C. Moore, were attended by many invited guests, who were seated in the gallery above the seniors on the main floor.

From the chapel, the seniors moved again in procession to Sanders Theatre, where an hour before noon the annual class day exercises were held.

These exercises were opened with prayer by the Rev. Prof. Moore, and the usual orations, readings and chorals followed

Chapman delivered the class oration; Pierpont Stackpole of Milton read his class poem; Ambrose Keeley of Fall River gave the class ode, and Class Chorister Richard T. Flood led the seniors in their songs.

The tree exercises this afternoon were limited to the seniors alone, but a far larger attendance is expected immediately afterward in the Stadium, where the ivy oration is to be given by Geoffrey Gates of Elyria, O., to be followed by cheering, singing, the presentation of the class banner to President Robert L. Summers of the freshman class, the group singing of "Fair Harvard," and the annual confetti battle.

Tomorrow more than 11,000 will witness the second game in the annual Harvard-Yale baseball series.

Class day was preceded by the annual senior dance and spread in Memorial Hall, Cambridge. More than 700 couples were present. Thursday the commencement exercises take place.

About a dozen class reunions were lined up today and were expected to be in full swing by tomorrow. These were of classes 3, 5, 10, 15, 20, 25, 40 and 50 years out of Harvard, and a few classes in between.

Speaker of the House Nicholas Longworth and Congressman James A. Gallivan are members of the "forty-year-out," the class of 1887, but neither was in evidence on the campus today.

U. S. Army Band Features Parade of Yale Alumni

New Haven, June 21 (A.P.).—Each with its own band and gaily appareled as Robin Hoods and corsairs, sailor laddies, cowboys and jockeys the reunion classes at Yale University today paraded to Yale Field to see the first game of the annual classic between Harvard and the sons of Eli.

Perhaps the most noteworthy band in the parade was that of the First Corps area of the United States army, which was brought by Major-General Preston, area commander, to act as official escort of his class, 1892.

The army band, the first of its kind ever to participate in Yale commencement festivities, arrived Sunday in full regalia, and besides participating in the memorial exercises of the class for its dead, serenaded Provost Henry S. Graves, a member of the class, who is recovering from an operation.

TRACES MAN WHO LEFT HER "WAITING AT THE CHURCH"

Chicopee, June 21 (A.P.)—Wilfred Martell, twenty-eight, who yesterday disappointed his prospective bride, Miss Yvonne Lachapelle, and a company of wedding guests by his failure to appear for the ceremony in Assumption Church, was today heard from in Worcester, according to Miss Lachapelle's friends.

She and her mother, Mrs. Philomen Lachapelle, left for that city today without stating their plans. Martell's father lives in Worcester.

CUPID THROWS STASIAK IN LOVE MATCH

Ignacy (Stanley) Stasiak, well-known Polish wrestler, had his shoulders pinned to the mat today by a fluffy-haired, pink-skinned youngster of tender years, who is also reported to be blind.

The conqueror of the "Terrible Pole" was no other than young Dan Cupid himself.

Stasiak refused to say whether he was tossed to the mat with a head-lock or a toe hold, but at any rate he appeared at Cambridge City Hall with Mrs. Isabella Savoy, attractive 31-year-old divorcee, and filed marriage intentions.

In sporting circles it is whispered that Stasiak won his bride when he pinned the shoulders of Dr. Sarpolis, Lithuanian wrestler, to the mat at the Grand Opera House last Thursday night.

Stasiak confided to friends that he was desperately in love with the divorcee and he proposed to her.

"Go throw this fellow Sarpolis and I'm yours," or words to that effect, are reported to have been the reply of Mrs. Savoy. Thos who saw the match last Thursday night wondered at the ferociousness of Stasiak's attack, which quickly subdued his opponent.

The answer to that attack was given at the Cambridge City Hall, where the wrestler gave his age as thirty-five and his address as No. 11 Longfellow road, Cambridge. Mrs. Savoy gave her residence at No. 19 Longfellow road and her occupation as "at home." Mrs. Savoy was recently divorced from Walter Maczarski.

You won't have to go down the cellar stairs any more . . . .

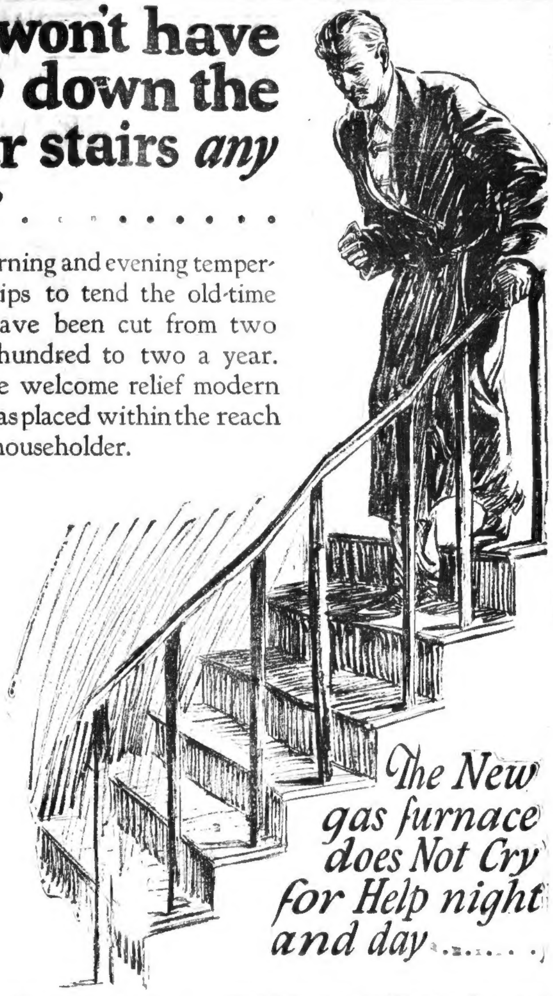
Those morning and evening temper-teasing trips to tend the old-time furnace have been cut from two or three hundred to two a year. That's one welcome relief modern progress has placed within the reach of every householder.



The New gas furnace does Not Cry for Help night and day . . . . . .

AT tne first cold snap, you light the gas furnace burner. Next spring you turn it off. Setting the thermostat for uniform room temperature takes only a minute. Your home and premises are rid of smoke, soot, dust and ashes—your basement always clean and usable. And with Gas Heat, your "fuel bin" is always full.

The history of home heating by "Pipe Line" in Boston during the past Winter has been one of complete satisfaction. Your neighbor or anyone using Gas Fuel heating will tell you they would not go back to the old-time furnace because they never before experienced real, uninterrupted home comfort. You, too, can enjoy this blessing.

AUTOMATIC
GAS HEATING

The Gas Furnace represents the newest and most positive form of home heat control. These automatic Gas Furnaces are made in sizes to supply the heat needed in any building, large or small. They are adapted to present heat distributing systems as well as to new building installations.

Our own thirteen-story building at 100 Arlington Street, corner Columbus Avenue and Stuart Street, Boston, containing 2,175,000 cubic feet of space, is being Heated by Gas.

ABOVE the "smoke line" the sun shines brightly—the air is fresh and clear. Why accept the shadow—the smoke clouds which polute Boston's air and drop their sooty grime? Smoke contains elements highly destructive to property and injurious to health—arsenic, sulphur, tar—grit that rasps the membranes and lays them open to disease attacks.

There is no need to have this "shadow", this smoke menace, over Boston, if its homes and factories will use smokeless fuel. Everyone who uses Gas for heating contributes to the health, the beauty and the prosperity of the community.

Help make Boston a Smokeless City

Begin planning now for next Winter's comfort. Have your installation completed and ready for the first cold snap. First, let us demonstrate its advantages to you. We'll send a heating expert, any time you say, to figure—without obligation—the Gas Heating of your home or other building.

"HEAT BY PIPE LINE" is worth investigating

RADIO DIALOG

IN the past week, three friends have stopped us and complained that, well not much doing now in radio, is there? Just to really make sure we looked over our desk this morning.

We had been away for two days on a mountain trip and our desk was overflowing. Of course we knew that Commander Byrd's plane will probably carry an automatic radio broadcaster, and that Lindy is "mike" frightened, and that Eskimo Donald MacMillan will carry radio again on his sixth far-north trip.

* * *

But we also noticed that on July 1, the Canadians have the Confederation Diamond Jubilee broadcast which is going to be the biggest radio event ever (according to the Canadians). All the biggest politicians up there are carefully memorizing, for the broadcast is scheduled to have speeches from eve till morn.

* * *

A large New York and Boston chain of stations will conduct a memorial requim broadcast for the passing of General Guy E. Tripp. If this is not the first such use of radio, it is a very proper and fitting tribute to the late chairman of the Westinghouse Company.

* * *

Over in New York State, where they do not know what a good baked bean is, a brakeman, a moving train, and an engineer has their names in the papers. It was because the two men talked very satisfactorily although separated by a mile of running train. They used radio telephone, of course.

It was the first time such a performance had ever been successful.

We knew that the Chairman of the Radio Commission would become accustomed to his job after awhile. At first he stuck right to his office and worked. But Washington soon showed him how high officials do things. Now the Admiral makes beautiful prophecies at college commencements.

When P. T. Barnum's famous clown, Sherwood, speaks tomorrow night from WEAF, will he wonder how many of the "one born a minute" variety are listening.

When PeeTee started the circus, it was about the most marvelous thing on earth. Now we got bored when de do not hear California every week.

Remember the shawdoy movie "serials" of ten years ago? Ten or twelve weekly "episodes" would constitute a weekly story. A New York station has now invented the same idea applied to radio. Every Monday night the plot gets thicker and thrillier until the next program is almost due. Then the hero heroine, or whoever is handiest, is left about to be killed, kidnaped, or buried in grapefruit salad until the next "episode."

Final Bid 4 H Played by South

Salient Points of the Bidding

A five-card suit headed by the Ace, dropping to the ten or smaller, is more in the nature of a secondary than a primary suit bid. Hence its initial call should be avoided if holding another initial bid in the hand. Therefore South bids Hearts originally rather than Spades.

West's bid of Spades overcalled with two Hearts by North is denied by East with a three Club bid. The bidding from this point follows normal lines. South securing the contract at four Hearts.

Salient Points of the Play.

Trick 1. East plays high in Diamonds asking for a second lead of the suit, as with only one Club unaccounted for, he realizes the futility of encouraging a Club lead.

Tricks 3 and 4. Declarer's objective is the establishment of Dummy's Clubs and not the immediate elimination of the adverse trumps. He leads trumps from Dummy, however, so as to enter his own hand for a more advantageous lead of Clubs and as West drops the ten of trumps Declarer plays a second round in hopes that West may also be found with the Queen of trumps, in which case Declarer believes game will be assured. The basis of his hope is clearly shown in the value of the partnership trumps with the ten and Queen gone. A top trump in Dummy with the aid of his own trumps promises the establishment of Clubs.

Trick 6. South unblocks, trumping with the higher of his two Hearts.

Trick 8. South passes as a continuation of his plan of play after a ruff, would, if properly defended, give him only nine tricks, one short of game.

Trick 9. Declarer ruffs in Dummy and East can make only his high trump.

LAW TAKES DOG FROM BOY

LAW GIVES DOG BACK TO MAN

Pup's Testimony Is Strong in Court, but Judge Has to Make Hard Decision

Judge Edward L. Logan, genial Solomon of the South Boston Court, today rendered a decision after using Solomon's methods, which was against Solomon's practice but in accordance with the law.

And Judge [illegible] sorry for the [illegible] to observe the law.

It was all over a dog. Not [illegible] of a dog, just one of these fox terriers the kiddies [illegible] smuggle into [illegible] just part [illegible] less. His [illegible] have been Spot or Rags. Just one of those thoroughbred mongrels.

PAT LOSES HIS DOG.

It seems while Pat and his dog were at Columbus Park when Piekarski appeared, looked at the dog and then took him away under [illegible]. Pat [illegible] went home crying [illegible] his father. Then Judge Logan acted the part of Solomon. The dog was sent from the courtroom and [illegible] stage arranged. The dog was called back and [illegible] the open [illegible] over to the Connollys, while Piekarski [illegible] his master [illegible] uttered [illegible] words of [illegible] But the dog [illegible] into [illegible] arms and stayed there.

It was plain to Judge Logan and to the court that the dog preferred young Pat, but there was the matter of prior ownership. "Will you sell him?" asked Judge Logan.

"Oh, no," said Piekarski, "I think too much of him."

And while the Connollys, young Pat in tears, walked hand in hand from the courtroom Mr. Benjamin Piekarski picked up the dog and rolled from the courtroom smiling broadly. He had won. The law was on his side. And the boy wept.

VAN SWERINGEN GIVES FIGURES

Washington, June 21 (A. P.)—O. P. Van Sweringen, Cleveland railroad operator, was directed by the Interstate Commerce Commission today to answer a series of questions relating to railroad stock purchases and financing which he declined to answer last week on the advice of his attorneys.

After this decision Mr. Van Sweringen took the witness stand to give the disputed information.

Van Sweringen's refusal to answer questions had halted the inquiry into the Chesapeake & Ohio plan to purchase control of the Erie and Pere Marquette railroads. Henry W. Anderson, attorney for C. & O. minority stockholders, demanded the railroad operator produce a record of all his purchases and sales of stock and of the bank balances kept in the Morgan and other large banking institutions.

The largest figure dealt with was $3,469,000 received for C. & O. common stock sold by the Vaness Company, a Van Sweringen corporation, between 1923 and 1927.

A statement of the bank balances of the Vaness Company averaged by months since 1923 was also proffered. The largest amount of deposits held by Morgan & Co. at any time was $20,000, but the Vaness balance with the Union Trust Company of Cleveland ranged from $3,000,000 to $4,000,000, and the Guardian Trust Company of Cleveland held large balances.

PEKIN IS SAFE, SAYS U. S. MAN

Shanghai, June 21 (A. P.)—The Nationalist [illegible] of South China [illegible] and at [illegible] their drive on Peking [illegible] in the opinion of Sumner Fessenden of Fort Fairfield, Me., resident of China 25 years and now chairman of the Shanghai Municipal Council.

Furthermore Chang Tso-Lin, leader of the Northern Alliance, is [illegible] to hold the Peking-Tientsin [illegible] and is determined to do so at all costs."

Mr. Fessenden said that foreign troops are likely to be needed for Shanghai's protection for six months at least and probably longer.

Chinese anti-foreignism was due to Soviet machinations in Mr. Fessenden's opinion.

SLOT MACHINE GAMING DENOUNCED BY COURT

Lawrence, June 21 (A. P.)—Branding storekeepers who take receipts from gaming or slot machines as petty thieves, Judge Frederic N. Chandler in Lawrence District Court today warned that defendants who appear before him in the future on charges of having them in their possession would be given jail sentences.

Thomas McAfee, Edward Sopolsky and John Hurd, all of this city, were fined $50 each. "Not only can parents ill afford to lose small change in this fashion," the court said, "but it inculcates a spirit of gambling in young minds which must not be permitted."

The Adventures of Robinson Crusoe ∾ By Daniel Defoe

Crusoe was the only man on the ship to escape. He slept in a tree and awoke to a calm, beautiful day. Then he swam out to the ship, which rested aground near shore. Next he built a raft of broken timbers, loaded it with provisions and paddled toward shore. He took along a dog he had found on the ship.

After mooring his raft in a small stream, Crusoe climbed a hill and saw that he was on an island. It was off the coast of South America, near the mouth of the Orinoco river, but he did not know that. He made frequent trips to the ship for more supplies, until another storm destroyed the vessel.

He had constructed a temporary shelter, but soon found this was in a bad [illegible]. So he built another home with a protecting steep hill behind it. In front of the home he erected a stockade, to keep out wild animals. He made his entrance by means of a ladder, which he drew up after him.

It was a long time before Crusoe's home was finished. In his wanderings he found grapes and a herd of wild goats. He tamed the goats and they supplied him with milk, butter and [illegible]. He also planted grain. As his clothes wore out he made new ones of goat skin.

Story of Love and Intrigue; A Girl Who Kept Her Head and a Tiger Woman

Lady Meldreth is fascinated by Eddie Wisden, a romantic figure in Pinaud's tea dance resort. Eddie has high hopes of marrying the great lady, and thereby solving his social and financial problems, as soon as she divorces her sporting husband, Lord Meldreth. The money situation in the Wisden home, which is ruled by a grasping mother, becomes exceedingly stringent, especially after Jill, Eddie's popular half-sister, loses her place with a road show. Jill is an idealist and her high standards make her brother rather ashamed of his own scheming conduct. Jill, miles from London, is in grave financial difficulties. Far out on a country road she is overcome by a terrific storm, and seeks refuge in a shack where she faints from fatigue, and is later discovered by Lord Meldreth, whose shooting camp happens to be nearby.

CHAPTER VII.

MELDRETH smiled at Jill reassuredly. The situation had become piquant now, because Jill so obviously possessed a sense of humor, and also because she was evidently not the worse for her drenching overnight or her long faint, and quite distractingly pretty.

He could take her looks into account now that her physical condition no longer remained an anxiety. She was not going to die on his hands. On the contrary, she looked very much alive and would be needing some breakfast soon.

"Good morning," he said blithely. "I can't answer all your questions, I'm afraid. Where are you? About five or six miles from Beaulieu——"

"Where's that?" she interrupted.

"A remote beauty spot, situated on the——"

"Oh, never mind about the situation," she again interrupted. "I'm trying to understand this one. I'm near Beaulieu, then. But I started to walk to Brokenhurst station yesterday afternoon——"

"Then I'm afraid you must have gone very far astray," Meldreth answered. "Which brings me to your next question. How did you get here? I simply cannot tell you that, because I haven't the faintest idea. All I know is that I found you in the barn at about eleven-thirty last night. And if it hadn't been for Psyche, who was in there barking"—he fondled the dog's head—"you might be there still."

Jill sat right up.

"And have I been here ever since? Why didn't I wake up?"

"Well, you were in a pretty dead faint. I gave you a good deal of brandy, which didn't seem to have much effect upon you at first, but in the end you must have gone straight from your faint into a sound sleep, so I didn't disturb you. Is there anything else you'd like to know? Oh, who on earth am I, you said?" Meldreth's my name, and I live here at the moment. Now I'm going to make you a cup of tea. It won't take a minute, and after that I expect you'd like to fix up."

Meldreth was the easier of the two.

"Here's your tea." He brought it

RUTH SNYDER WRITES LONG MESSAGE TO LORRAINE

CHAPTER 21.

By RUTH BROWN SNYDER

Copyright, 1927, King Features Synd., Inc.

My Darling Lorraine Baby—

It is now so long since I have seen and held and kissed you, and I do not know when I can again. So I write to you this letter to take the place of the hours I have wanted to be with you, to help you and show you my love, for the past few weeks and the weeks, many, I am afraid, to come.

Mother is in [illegible] darling. I am not going to [illegible] the truth. You have a [illegible] young as you are, of what [illegible] about.

From the depths of her grief and sorrow and [illegible] she wants to make you understand and see and remember, so that you may be spared the heartaches that are and have been hers.

They will tell you mother was a very wicked woman. Much that they will tell you is untrue. You who have known [illegible] will not believe all that they will say of mother—you, a [illegible] know; and I hope and think you will.

But some of what they will tell you, I bow my head and confess, only too true. Mother was weak, misguided and foolish.

Mother realizes now that all those truly big and wonderful things which to her then seemed to mean so little were the really important things, and those [illegible] things which she then thought were all in all of life were [illegible] but dangerous, dreadful and deadly.

The things in this life, my [illegible], that count are faith, contentment, sacrifice, honesty, truth and righteousness.

Go to church regularly. Never miss a service. Listen with all attention to what the minister reads from the Bible and [illegible] about it. Believe it, take it deep to heart. It is the biggest thing on earth and means more to you than health, pleasure, glory, life itself.

STRENGTH IN CHURCH

It will give you the strength to go on and the courage to meet [illegible].

Believe, [illegible] divine message, [illegible]. Pray, [illegible].

Then you will be satisfied; you will be happy. Evil will not tempt you. Only the beautiful and [illegible] things of this earth, the dutiful and pious things—wifehood, motherhood, cleanliness, charity, good will—these will give you infinite earthly joys and you will not crave others.

I want you to study your school lessons, too. Improve your mind. It will enlarge your chance to guide, counsel and do good to others.

Your body, my baby, is a God [illegible] It was [illegible] so that it [illegible] of your spirit [illegible] to bear the burdens of sorrow and [illegible] contentment [illegible] to go back [illegible] dust a [illegible] for [illegible].

[illegible] of life are in the Hereafter, not here. [illegible]

Be satisfied with life as long as [illegible] a woman [illegible] a man.

To test us it is so ordered that we must endure much [illegible] and [illegible] and that we must die at the end.

FAITH AND HOPE

To go through that test we are given courage, faith and hope—and that blessed gift that is [illegible] if we only have the others: patience.

Waiting is as big a part of mortal life as working.

It is the restless streak in many of us that makes us [illegible] through the forbidden barriers to seek here what awaits us there [illegible] and misery of the world.

For every "hero" who achieves [illegible] thousand people falter and fail in the attempt. It is far better to stay in the crowd than push out and be [illegible] down. Be of the crowd [illegible] up above, the [illegible] ALL [illegible]. Wait. Endure. Work. Be satisfied. Be [illegible]!

Above all, having cast your lot, [illegible].

Think well, consider carefully before you make decisions. But, having married, having become a mother (as I pray and hope you will), know that you are bound [illegible] thoughts of what [illegible] have been or what might [illegible]. If you do that, if you [illegible] your own sense of satis-

MARION DAVIES' BEST COMEDY AT STATE

By LEO GAFFNEY

"Tillie the Toiler" at Loew's State is Marion Davies' funniest film.

In it the vivacious star is whirled along through a series of episodes taken from the lively career of the Russ Westover comic strip heroine, and her companions are the other amusing characters of this Boston Daily Advertiser feature.

Under the brisk direction of Hobart Henley the action flows along with velvety smoothness [illegible] lapses of time in the story are indicated only by the camera and the players come and go in the natural manner of everyday existence.

Without exception the cast is perfectly chosen. Miss Davies suits the [illegible] of typing Tillie to a nicety. She is aggressive but never [illegible] slowly but not brazen. In a world of blonde stars Tillie is a [illegible] of all the little office [illegible] of this big city who bravely [illegible] world each day with the high resolve to make the most of it.

And the supporting players follow closely. Matt Moore appears as Mac, the office drudge, soberly intent on plugging ahead. George K. Arthur, whom the fans are beginning to recognize as a comedian in his own right, struts about pompously as the eye-bearing little general manager, Mr. Whipple. Harry Crocker pleasantly animates the character of the millionaire, Pennington Fish, and George Fawcett is irresistibly comic as the explosive Mr. Simpkins.

No small share of "Tillie the Toiler's" hour and a half of fun is contributed by Ralph Spence's smart subtitles. One in particular is a gem. Of Mr. Fish's Poker Club Spence writes: "A person comes in [illegible] like a lion but goes out like a lamp."

All in all "Tillie" is a [illegible] success. It is a [illegible] and yet [illegible] the kind of comedy for which Marion Davies is eminently suited, and it is bound to prove her most popular [illegible] the most [illegible] inclined audience cannot resist it.

On stage at the State Phil Spitalny wields a restless baton and his [illegible] break out in a fresh [illegible] assortment of tunes and tricks. [illegible] Peterson [illegible] organ desk and [illegible] short films complete the program.

Dr. [illegible]ATON, New York [illegible] mentalist, says Christ[illegible] will eclipse even Lindbergh's reception. "Instead of the [illegible] of one city coming together [illegible] the inhabitants of the [illegible] Heavens, yes, even of [illegible] and tremble in awe and w[illegible]

THIS [illegible], according to [illegible], will last at least a [illegible] years more. By that [illegible] the inhabitants of Heaven [illegible] and Hell itself" will make a total most impressive.

It [illegible] fact that Lindbergh [illegible] crowd, [illegible] George Washington [illegible] Joan of Arc, [illegible], everybody you ever [illegible].

THE PENNSYLVANIA Railroad, commanded by General Atterbury, now a three thousand million dollar concern, [illegible] income in 1926 of [illegible] and of every dollar 46 cents and 33 one-hundredths went for wages. That shows [illegible] everybody. Men that do one hundred per cent. of the WORK might well get 46 per cent. of the income, assuming good pay for those that do the THINKING.

SIX DOCTORS in a public hospital are accused of hazing three younger doctors, who were bound, gagged, tied to their beds, ducked in cold water, covered with shoe blacking and otherwise treated brutally.

The six accused, if convicted, should be made to postpone the practice of medicine for about ten years, while learning not to disgrace that profession.

THIS STUPID hazing by full-grown men, who should have known better, is made all the more contemptible by the fact that the three men hazed were Jews. Un-American race prejudice undoubtedly played a part in the vicious performance.

LONDON eagerly awaits Miss Fanny Ward, actress, aged sixty, said "to look not a day older than twenty."

Old ladies, anxious to be young, will be interested in Miss Ward's demonstration that the thing is possible. However, it is much less important that a woman of sixty should look like a woman of twenty than it is for a woman of sixty to look like a SENSIBLE woman of sixty.

THOSE ANXIOUS to keep out "inferior foreigners," forgetting that this nation, except a few Indians, is made up entirely of immigrants and their descendants, may be interested in the report of New York City's Charity Organization Society.

Among families asking for help, unable to take care of themselves, and investigated, 95 per cent. were native-born Americans, only five per cent. foreigners.

Yesterday Lindbergh was made a colonel in the United States Army Air Corps Reserve by Secretary Davis, which is pleasant, not important. It would have given Lindbergh more pleasure to hear from Secretary Davis that a man understanding flying would be put in charge of United States air forces, and those forces no longer be made second class toys of the Army and Navy departments.

BRITISH PAPERS, amused by stories of Mr. Coolidge "catching a trout with half a worm," print the news as a good joke, next to news of "courts" to be held by King George and Queen Mary.

For a President to fish with half a worm is not, however, half as funny as it is for a great nation to need a King George and Queen Mary.

HAZING OF JEWS STIRS MAYOR OF NEW YORK

New York, June 21 (A.P.).—Mayor James J. Walker today personally headed one of three investigations into charges that religious bias prompted the hazing of three Jewish internes by their 23 colleagues at Kings County Hospital, a city institution in Brooklyn.

Six of the physicians were arrested on charges of assault preferred by their Jewish colleagues and held on bail for further hearing. They denied the charges and refused to discuss the incident.

The three doctors said they were seized in their beds, bound, gagged and ducked into a bath tub of icy water. Two charged they were painted with ink or shoe polish. They told police that pillow cases were drawn over their heads but that of the twenty or more men who took part in the attack they recognized the six.

The other investigations were being conducted by Bird S. Coler, commissioner of public welfare, and the committee on internes of the medical board of the hospital.

Coler said the attack "seems like a kind of religious war." He pointed out that Kings County Hospital is the only institution under his jurisdiction where Christian physicians outnumber their colleagues of the Jewish faith. There are 62 Christians, as against 22 Jews in the city's hospital personnel, he said.

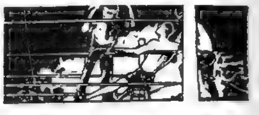
DEMPSEY MUST FIGHT AT RICKARD'S PRICE

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTS

NEWS THE DAY IT HAPPENS



TIGER JACK TO DEMAND $250,000

Expected to Reduce Figure After Meeting Tex Today; Sharkey Anxious to Fight

By JACK CONWAY

New York, June 21.—Jack Dempsey and Tex Rickard will go to the mat this afternoon in an effort to eliminate the remaining obstacles to the 15-round bout between the former champion and Jack Sharkey which is planned for the Yankee Stadium on July 21.

With Sharkey already within the fold, Rickard told this writer today that he does not expect to have any trouble in getting Dempsey to sign.

Jack Conway

"When I first talked terms with Dempsey for a Sharkey bout he asked for $[illegible] and a forty per cent privilege," said Tex. "Since then Jack has cut his demand for a $[illegible] guarantee and has also reduced his percentage figure. I do not believe that we shall have any trouble in reaching an agreement today."

I understand that Dempsey is asking a guarantee of $250,000 and that he is prepared to accept a 35 per cent privilege. He will probably shave both of these figures after he talks with Rickard.

That Dempsey still has a terrific hold on the boxing public of America was shown by the large pile of orders for tickets for the Dempsey-Sharkey bout on Tex Rickard's desk.

DEMPSEY HAS COLOR.

"Dempsey has color," said Rickard. "He is one of the greatest showmen in the history of the boxing game. I am sure he will draw $1,000,000 with Sharkey as his opponent. If Sharkey beats Dempsey there will not be an arena in America large enough to care for the crowd that will want to see Sharkey battle Tunney for the championship.

"Just now it looks as though the Tunney match will go to Chicago. Soldiers Field has a seating capacity of 150,000 and I feel that every seat will be taken when Tunney and the challenger enter the ring."

Dempsey comes to New York as his own business agent. Gene Normile who attended to the business end of the Dempsey outfit before the Tunney bout, has met the same fate as Jack Kearns.

Gus Wilson, Dempsey's trainer, has been in New York for several days trying to pick a location for Jack's training camp and also to secure sparring partners. He has held several conferences with Rickard but he has not had any real authority to act for the former champion.

I learned on good authority today that Gene Tunney has made another protest against Rickard staging a Dempsey-Sharkey bout. The champion has asked Rickard to discard Dempsey and name Sharkey as his opponent for the championship bout in September.

Tunney feels that there is danger of the winner of the Dempsey-Sharkey bout suffering an injury which would prevent a title match this year. Gene believes Sharkey will defeat Dempsey but he would feel much easier if the Boston heavyweight would remain idle until he faces the champion.

SHARKEY WANTS TO FIGHT.

Asked if he would pass up Dempsey if guaranteed a Tunney bout, Sharkey declared he wanted to fight Jack next month.

"I think the best way to keep in condition is by fighting regularly," said Jack. "I'm beginning to itch for a real scrap right now, and it is only a few weeks since I fought Maloney. I have always wanted to get a crack at Dempsey, and this is my opportunity. I shall beat him sure and then do as much for Tunney.

"Dempsey has only had one fight in over three years. I have had 33 fights during the same period. Boxers rust out by inactivity. That's what has happened to Dempsey. I shall try to knock him out, and believe I can do so. The Tunney match will then take care of itself."

Sharkey also revealed to me that he will train at Stillman's Gym for the Dempsey bout.

"I trained for Wills, McTigue and Maloney at Stillman's," said Jack. "It has been lucky for me and I'm going to stay there. I like to train indoors for an outdoor fight."

Dempsey Visits Estelle's Parents

Wilmington, Del., June 21 (A.P.).—Jack Dempsey interrupted his journey to New York today by visiting his wife's parents here. He expects to go to New York tomorrow to confer with Tex Rickard on his sports program. His wife, Estelle Taylor, film actress, accompanied him from Los Angeles.

Braves May Lose Pitcher Mogridge

New York, June 21 (A.P.).—George Mogridge, veteran southpaw pitcher of the Boston Braves, has under consideration an offer to become manager of the Rochester Internationals.

This was disclosed today by Dave Bancroft, manager of the Braves, who declared he understood that Mogridge, if he accepted the offer, would not go to Rochester until later in the season.

"The Boston club does not wish to lose Mogridge," said Bancroft, "but will not stand in the way of an advancement for him."

Even a Last Place Club Is Popular When "Babe" Comes To Town

EVENING AMERICAN SPORTS

SPORTS

Ruth Real Hero
Gives Credit to Others
Praises Lou Gehrig

Still Loves Game
Braves Good in West
Should Figure in Race

—By Nick Flatley—

RUTH GREAT BECAUSE HE HAS VICTORY URGE

GEORGE HERMAN RUTH, sport's greatest drawing card, can do several things as well as he can knock baseballs lopsided. He can give credit where the same is due, which is rather a rare trait to find in a hero in the heydey of his glory.

The Babe, who is spending the Summer rattling home runs around the A. L. circuit, thinks he will wreck his own record, hung up six years ago. He's trailing right along with that record now, and a couple of good hitting days will put him in front.

Nick Flatley

Mister G. H. doesn't attribute his large deeds this Spring to any special effort or ability of his own. He doesn't coyly admit that he's going along because he has been thinking baseball day and night, and meticulously avoiding the snares and pitfalls that are spread along the star's trail. Though well he might. Most of the big boys do.

George Herman is different, though, which is one of the reasons of his great popularity. He says he's hitting as many homers as ever a man did, because Lou Gehrig follows him in the batting order. The Babe admits that Lou is feared by the pitchers just as much as he, Babe, is.

"They'd just as soon pitch to me as to Gehrig," chirps M. Ruth. "So I get more good balls to hit at. That Gehrig's a bear, and he might make a record if I don't. I think I can get as many as I did in '21 if my leg holds up. I don't care much, though I'd like to break that mark.

"None of us are shooting at records. We're just a hustling ball club that wants to win another pennant, and get even for the licking we took in the last world series. And it looks as if we were on the way."

Ruth, as long as he stands up, will be a ball player above everything else. He gets as much kick winning now as he did when he started. He plays because he likes the game and gives everything he has in every game. That's why he keeps going so well. History will prove, if you care to investigate, that the careful athletes, who try to save themselves at every opportunity, go more quickly to the junk pile than the boys who tear in and let the future take care of itself.

WON'T BE LONG BEFORE OUR GIRL ATHLETES WILL BE MAKING REAL BIDS FOR PLACES ON THE OLYMPIC TEAM. THE WAY THE SO-CALLED WEAKER ONES HAVE IMPROVED TRACK RECORDS IS AT LEAST STARTLING.

Good heavyweights nowadays require statistical and financial experts as well as sparring partners.

BRAVES WESTERN RECORD SOMETHING TO CHEER

THE figures of the first Western invasion by National League clubs show that the strength of the older league is decidedly in the far parts. No Eastern club has any pennant chance, excepting the Giants, and they will have to snap into more consistent baseball quickly to be considered a threat much longer.

Our lowly Braves were the one Eastern club to make even a respectable showing out on the midland paths. They won seven games out of 13 played, which was really remarkable, considering the class of the opposition. The Tribe is playing good ball these times, and will figure prominently in the race, although it will hardly get up near the roof.

The other Eastern clubs found the West a tough section, their records being as follows: New York, 5 won, 10 lost; Brooklyn, 4—9; Philadelphia, 5—12.

The Westerners built up a fine total average, winning 39 games and losing 21, for a .650 percentage. The Cubs, with their sensational winning dozen, had the best of the invasion, collecting that 12 while losing but four. The other clubs worked thusly: Pittsburgh, 9—5; St. Louis, 9—5; Cincinnati, 9—7.

Our Braves won three out of four from the Cardinals, divided a quartet with the Cubs, dropped two out of three to the Reds, and three of four to the Pirates. Any team with enough stuff for that has potentialities of traveling quite a bit along the baseball highway.

body action. This can never be attained if the feet are spread far apart in the address. The feet so far apart make it necessary to employ a jerky application of power when the club is swung forward, partly for the reason that the upper body hasn't had enough room for turning or pivoting. The body turning should be easy and instinctive. If the pull is great and you have an awkward feeling about it the chances are the feet are too far apart.

CHAMPION 'CANTAB' NINE IS HONORED

The championship Cambridge High and Latin baseball team was tendered a reception in the assembly hall of the high school. Nearly 1,000 persons were present. Mayor Edward A. Quinn and members of the school committee spoke.

The team went through the Suburban league season without a defeat. Members of the team were presented with sweaters and letters, while Leander McDonald, coach of the nine, was presented with a watch.

OVER 100 STARTERS FOR ELKS' 10-MILE RACE

Entries are pouring in to the committee of Somerville Lodge, B. P. O. Elks, in charge of the monster athletic carnival to be held at Dilboy Field, West Somerville, Thursday evening, June 30.

From all appearances the ten-mile road race, which will start from the Elks Home, No. 90 Central street, will have over 100 starters. The feature of the affair has proven itself a valuable attraction and great interest is being displayed by the residents of [illegible].

Golf Notes

Due to the fine impression the Oakley Country Club four ball invitation made on the amateurs last year, the field will be both larger and faster this season. The course will be in championship shape and although it is doubtful if any combination will be able to lower the mark set up by Billy Munsell and G. Wilson MacDow, the medalists for the qualifying round, some low scoring is predicted.

Billy Munsell and Phil Hill will be the only players who were in the finals last year contesting this week at Oakley. Munsell will team up with Clark Hodder of Commonwealth, while Hill will have L. F. Wingate for his partner.

Because a majority of the members of the Boston Newspapermen's Golf Association possessed sufficient common sense to fail to put in an appearance at Belmont Spring yesterday the qualifying round of the association championship was postponed until one week from today at Albemarle.

A field of twenty-two waded around Belmont yesterday in the rain and upon their return to the clubhouse they were informed of the postponement, which was better news than they had expected, for the scoring was high, most of it being in the three figures.

One thing that the followers of the game can bank on is that little Donald Vinton of Plymouth, the present titleholder, will not give up his crown without a fight. There are few gamer golfers than the diminutive Plymouth professional and he will fight the invaders right through the 72 holes.

Judging from the showing he made during his exhibition with Jim Barnes against Dick Stalt and Herbert Lagerblade two years ago, Johnnie Farrell will be the favorite to win the Massachusetts open at Sandy Burr next week. Farrell was under the course record going to the [illegible] where he encountered trouble and lost out.

Fred J. Wright, Jr., the state amateur champion, and Emory Stratton of Brae Burn, should finish well up in the field. Wright has apparently recovered from his recent injury while Stratton has turned in some remarkably low medal rounds this season.

If he intends to live up to his reputation of playing all open tournaments, W. C. "Chick" Connolly of Wellesley is in for a busy week. "Chick" was at Nashua for the amateur-pro yesterday and after resting today he will jump up to Marlboro after which he will play Oakley and Bellevue before taking his Saturday night dip.

If Johnnie Farrell and Joe Turnesa take Jesse Guilford and Fred Wright into camp next Monday at Brae Burn, they should be booked against Emory Stratton and Eddie Stimpson. Then watch the turf fly.

Mello Will Try to K. O. "Mendel"

Although Al Mello, Lowell welterweight, blames his defeat at the hands of Ace Hudkins to the fact that he stepped out from the first round to win by a knockout, the popular local favorite still persists that he can take the measure of most of the present day 147-pounders by the sleep wallop route, and for this reason he will not deviate from his plan when he clashes with Johnny Mendelsohn in the feature bout of the Commercial A. C. at Mechanics Building Thursday night.

I figured right when I signed with P.A.

WHEN I first started to smoke a pipe, I looked around me. The fellows who seemed to be getting the most out of their pipes were filling them from a bright-red tin, with a picture of a man in a frock-coat on it. They told me it was the greatest pipe-tobacco ever.

I decided to find out for myself. I bought a tin of Prince Albert. As I opened it, the aroma that floated out of it gave me a real thrill. It reminded me of a trek through the woods when the dew is on the leaves and the sun is on the up. I couldn't wait to try it.

The very first pipe-load won me. I was ready to sign on the dotted line. It was cool and sweet-flowing as Tennyson's brook. It was mild and mellow as spring sunshine. Yet it had that full, rich tobacco body that let me know I was smoking. You know what I mean.

I sure figured right when I signed with P.A. The philosophers say the only real pleasure is that which you share with others. So I'm letting you in on the ground floor. Get yourself a tidy red tin of good old P.A. today. Fill your pipe to the brim—and go to it!

P. A. is sold everywhere in tidy red tins, pound and half-pound tin humidors, and pound crystal-glass humidors with sponge-moistener top. And always with every bit of bite and parch removed by the Prince Albert process.

Tex Tells Mr. Boston of Good Old Days

By Jack Conway

NEW YORK, June 21.—I found Mr. Boston coming out of Tex Rickard's office at Madison Square Garden.

"Johnny Buckley started it," said the veteran. "He's just back from California where Johnny Vacca fought Newsboy Brown. He was telling of the wonders of California. This got Rickard started.

Mr. Boston

"Tex leaned back in his big leather chair and let his mind drift back some 30 years.

"'When I was a young fellow like Jack Sharkey over there,' said Tex, 'I thought the greatest thing in the world would be to have $10,000. I was [illegible] in Texas at the time and wanted to get enough coin to start some kind of a ranch.

"'I started for Alaska to get the ten grand. And I passed through California on the way. At the time California didn't have its moving picture locations, but the country was just as grand.

"'I was one of about 300 men who went into the interior of Alaska. It was [illegible] wild country. That was two years before the Klondike rush.

"'They were rough, but honest [illegible] Alaska in those days. We elected our own judge, while the juries were picked from our own crowd. Our courts probably did not know as much law as do our courts of today, but they did possess common sense.

"'WHEN I left Alaska I didn't go back to Texas. I was looking for new fields to conquer. Back in 1906 I was at Goldfield, Nev., a boom town. Somebody suggested running a boxing show. I [illegible] down to New York and had seen the Terry McGovern-Jimmy [illegible] bout at the old Garden. I thought it would make a good card. I [illegible] Joe Humphries offering to pay $15,000 for the match. Joe went around showing my telegram to the gang saying it had been made by some crazy man out in Nevada.

"'I afterwards learned that the boy whom I had sent to the telegraph office with the telegram had pocketed the money and sent the telegram collect. No wonder Humphries thought I was daffy. Offering $15,000 for a purse and sending a telegram collect.

"'Not hearing from Humphries, I wired Billy Nolan, manager of Battling Nelson, offering to pay $30,000 for a Nelson-Gans bout. I [illegible] Nolan at Salt Lake City. He wired back for me to put the money up in a Salt Lake bank and that the match was on.

"'I took Nolan's telegram and showed it to the big miners out in Goldfield. Inside of an hour, I had backing of $60,000. Nolan came out to Goldfield and I then located Gans. It was agreed that I should pay Nelson $22,500 and Gans $10,500. I posted the $33,000 purse in a bank at Goldfield. The show drew over $69,000 and I was able to pay the boxers, pay off my backers, build an arena and make money.

"'THE Johnson-Jeffries bout in 1910 was my next big venture. I was thought to be crazy when I hung up a purse of $101,000. If I had been allowed to go through with my original plans and stage the match in California, it would have drawn $860,000 and I would have cleaned up a fortune. I was forced to shift to Reno, where the bout drew $271,000. I made close to $400,000 on the moving pictures of this contest.

"'Since those days boxing has grown bigger each year. Many persons figured I reached the top in gate receipts when Dempsey and Carpentier drew $1,600,000. Dempsey and Tunney then drew $1,800,000. The winner of the Sharkey-Dempsey bout against Tunney will top $2,000,000.'

"Jack Sharkey interrupted to ask Tex which of his promotions gave him the greatest thrill.

"'From a promotion standpoint,' replied Rickard, 'I got my biggest thrill when I got Jeffries and Johnson into the ring. It was my first heavyweight venture.

"'From a boxing viewpoint, I got my greatest thrill out of the Dempsey-Firpo battle. It was a knockdown, drag 'em out battle such as we used to have in Alaska in the old days before they took all the romance out of life.'"

One Look And Dunn Calls Ruth Another Waddell

Take a look at the accompanying picture. Let your imagination fill in a diamond. On the sidelines, picture Jack Dunn, his eagle eye scanning every feature, every action, of every player.

The picture you see is what Jack Dunn saw when Brother Gilbert said:

"There's Ruth, watch him."

Jack Dunn took a good look.

"Good Lord," said he turning to his companion, Fritz Maisel, "there's another Rube Waddell in the rough."

George Ruth was out there, twirling for St. Mary's. His uniform consisted of a rough shirt and overalls. [illegible] Dunn made very few [illegible]

A popularity that only better taste can explain

IN the whole tobacco world there's no taste that can compare with the delicate richness of fine cigarette tobaccos.

And for the full development of this taste, there is no cigarette like Chesterfield.

Here, and here alone, do men find the world's finest cigarette tobaccos blended to yield every last bit of taste and character.

Pure natural tobacco taste—that's reason enough for Chesterfield's popularity.

Bringing the Soda Fountain Into Your Cottage

By MARTHA LEE

ARE you s[illegible] in [illegible] or cottage, far afield fr[illegible] and perhaps [illegible] missing, among other city c[illegible]ences, the corner soda fountain where you've always found unf[illegible] refreshments for Summer thirsts?

You can really bring the soda fountain right to your camp or cottage if you will keep in [illegible] erator a supply of ready-to-use chocolate syrup.

The good confectioner at the modern soda fountain [illegible] chocolate syrup [illegible] makes it often rather than keep his syrups [illegible] to keep them fresh.

Here's a recipe for a [illegible] ready to use [illegible] convenient to have on [illegible] and wh[illegible] you want a [illegible] chocolate-flavored thirst quencher.

CHOCOLATE SYRUP—Stir over direct heat a half cup of breakfast cocoa and one cup of cold water until smooth. Stir in two cups of sugar and a dash of salt until dissolved. Boil two minutes [illegible] with two teaspoons of vanilla. Pour at once in a glass jar [illegible]ly sealed in ice chest. This w[illegible] one [illegible].

In ten minutes you can make a [illegible] [illegible] keep [illegible] on [illegible] drinks [illegible] [illegible] glass [illegible] [illegible] cottage [illegible]

[illegible] back for [illegible] date business which good soda fountains have built up is due in many cases to [illegible] very chocolate syrup. But remember that in making the syrup you can't fool your palate with poor [illegible] breakfast [illegible] we use in the M[illegible] Kitchen.

The syrup must be smooth [illegible] cocoa butter. If you [illegible] be at all satisfactory.

CHOCOLATE MILK SHAKE—Allow a tablespoon and a half of syrup to a glass of milk. Pour milk and syrup in a shaker (or milk bottle). Add cracked ice and shake well.

RUSSIAN CHOCOLATE. Two or three tablespoons [illegible] Two tablespoons whipped cream, three quarters cup milk, cracked ice.

Pour [illegible] in a shaker (or milk bottle). Add cracked ice [illegible] shake well. Pour in [illegible] with [illegible] cream. This [illegible]

Here's a nourishing drink for the [illegible] Pour it from the shaker [illegible] shake [illegible] chocolate syrup [illegible] good [illegible] better.

CHOCOLATE EGGNOG. Two or three tablespoons breakfast cocoa syrup, one and three-quarter cups milk, one egg, cracked ice.

Separate yolk and white of egg. In a shaker (or milk bottle) place egg yolk, chocolate syrup and milk. Add ice and shake hard. Beat the egg white till fluffy. Fold it into the mixture. Have cracked ice in glasses and pour the eggnog over it immediately. This recipe makes two drinks.

Chocolate malted milk is made with two tablespoons of malted milk powder for each glass of chocolate milk shake, when mixing.

CHOCOLATE EVAPORATED MILK SHAKE—Two or three [illegible] spoons [illegible] syrup, one cup evaporated milk, one-half cup water [illegible]

Pour the milk, chocolate syrup and water in a shaker [illegible] Add [illegible] shake [illegible] until frothy. Pour into glasses and serve at once. This recipe makes two drinks.

[illegible] ORANGE CHOCOLATE [illegible] is made by adding [illegible] of orange [illegible] juice to [illegible] glass of chocolate milk shake made with fresh or evaporated milk.

FROSTED CHOCOLATE—A CREAMY ICEBERG—Three tablespoons [illegible] cup [illegible] water.

For two [illegible] put one and one-half tablespoon syrup [illegible] the milk [illegible] ice cream in each glass. Add [illegible] charged water to each, stirring well. The soda counter is [illegible] at home.

The Love Slave ~ Corinne's Cry ~ By Homer Banks

HER GUARDIAN'S AID SOUGHT—Corinne called Clifford Chandler. He responded immediately, hurrying to her apartment in a taxi. His [illegible] face [illegible] had lost its composure and his brow was wrinkled in a frown. "Is there anything wrong?" he asked anxiously. Corinne checked an impulse to put her arms around this unworldly young man, so puzzled by the realities of life. After all, she remembered, he was her guardian. And it was he who had commanded her to give up her career—the stage.

THE BARRIER BETWEEN—She invited him to sit down. Her problem, she realized, was something that she could not present to him suddenly. And she wondered after he had actually arrived, what benefit his advice would be after all. He did not know Broadway. He was far removed from the problem of a modern American girl. In her heart she realized now that she had merely summoned Clifford Chandler for the comfort he could give her. And yet he was so conservative, so stiff—so formal.

BATTLING WITH FEAR—Corinne wanted to bury her head on his shoulder and have a good cry. She wanted to tell him all of her troubles and have him soothe her. And, yet, despite the fact that he was her guardian, she hardly knew him. Besides, he had been educated abroad and his continental reserve frightened her. If she could only make him realize that she was on the edge of the precipice. There was George Palmer, for instance . . . .

CHANDLERS EDICT—Young Chandler sat opposite her peering into her eyes. Corinne was at a loss to know how to proceed. She was afraid to reveal the attentions lavished on her by Palmer, for fear it would strengthen his threat to force her to leave the stage—even if it took a court order. But, somehow, Clifford Chandler seemed to divine her inward conflict. "This life you are leading here is all nonsense," he said sharply. "I shall demand that you come away with me at once." Your Health Can Be Improved

By Chas. A. L. Reed, M. D.

YOU are naturally more interested in keeping well than in getting well. That is to say, you believe first in preventing of disease and only second in curing disease.

But even that is not enough. You may be well, but there is such a thing as more health and better health.

This is attained most completely by living in harmony with the natural laws that make for your well-being. You accomplish this largely by guarding against the first and always insidious beginning of disease. This calls for the periodic health examination by your physician.

No health examination can ever be complete. A complete examination would be a full utilization of all available scientific methods for testing the quality of the tissues, the functional capacity of the organs and the possible effect of varying conditions of stress, etc. The subject would have to be kept under observation for a full year in order that comparative studies might be made and possibly therapeutic tests as well. Such an examination would certainly do more harm than good. An examination is complete if it fulfills the purpose for which it is undertaken. There is probably a different syllabus for industrial qualifications, life insurance, entrance to government service, etc.

There is no general standard of routine examination to insure that a man who goes to his doctor to be thoroughly overhauled should know exactly what tests are being applied, and it would mean a great increase in the public health if there were a sound and practical periodic health examination service within the reach of the whole people.

Industry and life insurance have an economic interest in the reduction of the sickness rate and death rate, and a considerable part of the cost could be borne by them. It would naturally be useless to set up a standard which could not be worked by the general practitioner nor afforded by the ordinary citizen, but it would be possible to provide a genuine, practically complete check-up of the human body that would satisfy these conditions.

CORRECT MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

I am going to attend a tea party next week given by a private school. Would you please tell me what to order, as there will be a choice, and how to go about eating it? I would appreciate it if you would help me out of any social error I might possibly make.

WILLING TO LEARN.

AT the tea party you will probably be asked if you prefer tea or chocolate, and simply say, for instance, "Tea, thank you." Then add how you take your tea, for instance, whether you prefer it strong or weak or medium, and if you like sugar with it and if so, how many lumps, and whether you prefer cream or lemon. You will very much help the hostess that is pouring if you perfectly definitely say, "Tea, thank you. Medium, two lumps and lemon." Then if you like "bready" things with your tea, take a sandwich or a piece of cinnamon toast or whatever is provided for that course. Later the sweet courses will be passed, usually small cakes to be eaten in the fingers, or a piece of layer cake passed on a plate w[illegible] [illegible] be assured that you will make [illegible] error at a tea if you eat [illegible] and if you indicate definitely your preference.

Story of a Girl Who Asked That Life Should Pay Her in Full

CHAPTER 36

"I'VE been to my cousin's. They are going to take the baby from me," cried Roen to Mark.

She told the things Frank Mullins said.

"Can they do this?"

"Yes."

"But the six months are almost up. Have I no rights?"

"None—they couldn't eventually set aside."

"And I must surrender him?" She turned about, her eyes appearing wild in the chalky white of her face. "Give him back? Why, I CAN'T!"

She came to him like a person in a daze. She put her hands on his shoulders. "I can't do this, Mark."

Instinctively he took her two hands and pressed them between the palms of his.

"Roen, listen," said he, longing to take her in his arms, his tongue husky with comfort, his heart dilated with love. "Don't take this so. It's a shock. It's dastardly. But, Roen—what is this child to you—"

"Don't—Mark—"

"And if they've the money now and want him. Roen, dear—"

She would not listen. She stared at him with a white, desperate smile. "I won't give him back! You realize this, Mark? Billie is MINE. And you must get him for me. You MUST!"

It was 6 o'clock but she would not put the baby to bed. She played for hours with him.

She held him till he fell asleep in her arms. She took his little square hand, with its wide sturdy fingers—and pressed the palm against her cheek. This little hand was hers because no one else would love it so—would guide it so.

She would not give him back, because she could not. He was woven into her heart—woven into its aching and aloneness—made part of her.

Jackie was frightened at the deadly quiet of her resolute: "But I'm not going to let them have him. He's mine!"

"Well, what do you gain by keeping him?" said he, casually. "He will never be truly yours."

"He is mine. No one knows how much!"

"He's a baby now—they're all more or less cute. Picture him in fifteen or twenty years. How much will he resemble you or be the child of your hopes, then?"

"Jackie, I've heard you admit Billie is adorable."

"He's the child of Frank Mullins and Evelyn. Fifty per cent of his heritage comes direct from them. He's theirs! All the loving in the world won't make him yours."

She nodded absently.

"Look here, Ron!" said he sharply. "Jinny and I think we will go to Europe. Ron, you've got to come with us. We can't be happy leaving you here. Now, you owe more to us—"

She smiled. She glanced at him with her old understanding gaiety. "You mean, Jackie, that you will take me to Europe and marry me? To whom? At my age. And I've a better job than I'll ever be able to get again—"

Roen Lived One Whole Week in Fear Over Situation

"Ron, it's not inconceivable that you may marry. You look awfully young. You've not changed a bit in years and years. You seem just the same to me. Jinny and I were saying the other night that you could be put in a room full of flappers and no one would guess you were a day more than 26 or 27 at the very outside. . . ."

Jackie watched her—heard her gay murmurs to the little boy who was running about. And kneeling there, she seemed desperately pathetic—a cruel, outrageous waste.

Lavishing her love on Evelyn Mullins' child!

"Like that damn dirty Mullins outfit," he now thought savagely. "To use her and knife her! Like that paltry ribbon clerk, Mullins!"

All this next week she lived in a fear. They might come and take Billie while she was at work. She gave Ulla orders to open the door to no one. Fortunately it rained most of the time. She felt a little relief. They couldn't break in. The baby was safe behind the good four walls and under lock and key.

Saturday the sun came out like a banner of glory. Evelyn phoned and asked Roen to visit her.

"Bring Billie," she said. "It's almost a month, Roen, since you've brought him."

But she did not bring him. She said to Evelyn: "Ulla had taken him out. I waited an hour, but it was so sunny she didn't bring him in."

This was pure fiction.

Evelyn showed Roen proudly through the new house.

"Is the house a gift to you?" asked Roen.

"It's Uncle Fred's house," Evelyn answered evasively. "I'm so disappointed you didn't bring Billie. We're ready to take him back, Roen, any time you want."

For a long, staggering moment Roen looked in her cousin's eyes. She said quickly, "That's awfully nice of you, Ev!"

Evelyn turned crimson. She snapped her teeth. "I suppose you begrudge me my own child! I suppose you're sorry we've the means now to keep him. You act like it. Frank said you even threatened to keep him!"

Roen became crafty. But she did not master the break in her voice. She said softly with a laugh that caught bitterly, "Of course you want him, Ev! Of course I'm glad you're fixed so well—"

Evelyn smiled. "We'll come and get him tomorrow—we might just as well."

Roen said abruptly: "Jackie and Virginia are going to Europe this Summer. They want me to go with them."

"They do? Then I guess you're glad to have Billie off your hands? I wonder why you were putting up a bluff?"

Said Roen, opening her purse and daubing herself all over her face: "You've treated me very ill. I don't mind this. But it's shameful in you to jeopardize Billie. And why? I've cared well for him this eight months. You are insulting in snatching him back so cruelly!"

With scarcely a glance she bade her cousin goodby. Riding home she listened to the clank of the car wheels on the rails—monotonous, afflicting sound. She thought, "I went too strong. I gave myself away!"

Suddenly Mark Took Phone and Called Frank Mullins

She went to Mark. He wished to say: "You can't win; end it quickly. You're only prolonging an agony—"

But he looked in her storming, wildly appearing eyes; heard her desperate "Tomorrow, Mark! I won't let them in. Mark you—I'll go away with him tonight—"

He walked back and forth. Suddenly he grabbed up the telephone and called Frank Mullins.

"Miss Rose tells us you want the baby tomorrow. Why didn't you notify me so that I could get a release signed? Saturday afternoon—none of the officers are around. It's nearly 5 now."

A pause that tolled off miserable suspense.

"You didn't think you needed any release? Why—certainly! She's had possession of the child. She's responsible to the State for him until notice is given that the parents have claimed him. I'll get the thing fixed up—oh, in a week—"

He put up the receiver quietly, aware of her glowing, grateful look. And of her hand reaching out and seizing his in fervor.

"They won't come tomorrow, Mark. Oh—" She laughed and flung back her head. . . . "And in the meantime you'll fight it to the finish. You'll save him for me."

"Roen," he began . . .

"Don't try to influence me, Mark. It just can't be done."

"But you say they have a nice place? And money enough. Roen—they are the parents. They have the first right. Don't break yourself—"

She shut her eyes. Sitting there mute and pale.

"The boy would be with his brother and sisters, Roen."

"He is well with me, Mark. Better than with his parents. My brother's baby will be his sister. Mark, he is well with me. And I—"

She suddenly pressed her open hands against her mouth . . . "Mark, I dare not think . . . what will become of me—without him—"

"I have only gained you a week, Roen—"

She sat pale, nodding. "You will find a way to gain more!"

At the end of that tragic week, Mark came to her.

"Mullins knows that I was stalling him. Roen, you must give the baby back or go into court and open a fight for him. You won't do this."

"I will do this!"

"You can only lose. In the end you are bound to lose."

She went over and leaned against the mantel and covered her face with her hands. The rich, flowing lines of her figure that had first so warmly stirred him now seemed rippling with beauty and a divine heart-breaking tenderness.

She was saying hoarsely: "How can they make me appear, Mark? Only what I am—ah, yes—only what I am."

He stooped over her. He bent his head to her ears: "Roen—don't say that—Roen, darling!"

He murmured all the reckless, loving things he felt. He leaned down and put his arms about her.

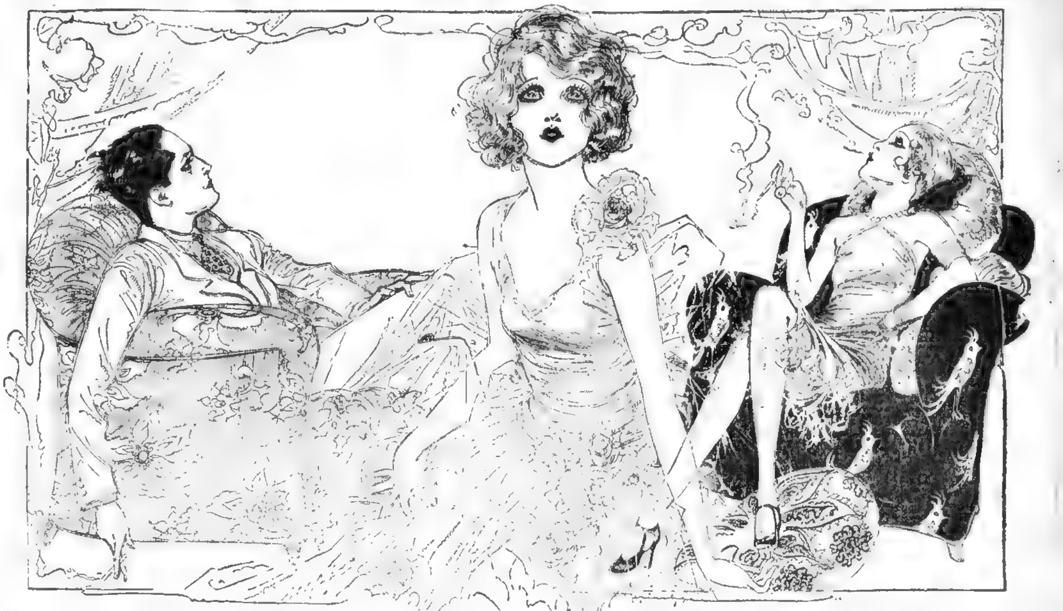
"The Girl That Might Have Been"

DRAWN BY
Nell Brinkley



LOVE is one business that seems to flourish on and on, to remain universal, to grow bigger and bigger every day, and that yet seems to never be sure how its dealings are going to turn out! It has no systems, no assurances of success, no method, nothing to go by. And that's why sometimes when a man dreams, between him and the face of the girl he did marry, and thought the very valentine of the world when he stepped into the office of "D. Eros and Minions," comes a vague face and figure that may never have been a real one, but is the embodiment of all the graces, the sweetness, the tenderness, that he had always thought a real girl should be. And MAYBE it WAS a real one once.

A girl with a skirt that you don't worry about every time she sits down—a skirt that has a bit of a lee-way, like a sail, and allows for a girl folding up. A girl with a feminine thing or two about her, like a rose, a tear of sentiment, or a tender heart for the unfortunate. A girl with a LITTLE mist of hair at the least, to show that she is not a gentleman. A girl with daintiness.

AN OLD FASHIONED GIRL. That's it. There are lots of them. I've seen them in the follies. And I've seen them on a farm. And I've seen them in dreams. But I didn't marry one."

While he contemplates the gentle person between them, he looks at the girl opposite, careless, a bit hard, and cool, and funny, and for one moment he sees clearly as in a crystal that the live girl might very easily have been the vision, if she had been able to know "what she wanted," and had not fallen into the ways of a "crowd."

'Curled Hands'; Jill Tells Lord Meldreth of Her Adventure

to her. Biscuits? Take two or three to keep yourself going until breakfast." He poured himself out a cup of tea as well.

"It's been an awful night," he said. "A perfect tempest. How on earth did you come to be on the road? Do you live in these parts?"

Jill was beginning to get her bearings.

"I was walking from Dewhurst to Brockenhurst, to catch a train," she recollected. "I'm an actress, and our company was stranded. We hadn't been paid, but everyone else had scraped up their fares and gone back to town. I wasn't so lucky, because I hadn't got a man at the back of me. I won't be helped like that, you see."

"I see," said Meldreth. "Go on."

"So I had to owe my landlady, who was a real old dear, and walk to the station with just the money for my fare to town. She said it was going to rain, but I didn't think so. I started out and I took a short cut. It turned out to be the wrong turning. I was hopelessly lost. Then I met a horrible tramp—not the down-on-his-luck kind, but the desperate sort. He got off with my purse, so there I was, [illegible] anywhere, without a penny. I walked on and on and it got quite dark, and the weather was worse every minute. By and bye, I began to feel rather ill. I'd eaten a lot of blackberries instead of a proper lunch, and I hadn't had any tea. I was wet and cold and hungry. I couldn't see any lights or houses, and the only thing I met was a cow. When I was at my last gasp I saw a sort of barn place looming up, and I just remember opening the door and hearing a dog bark, and that's all. The rest is a blank. I'm awfully grateful to you. It was so kind of you to look after me."

"I'm very glad I was able to be of any use," said Meldreth. "You needn't trouble about that. Anyone in my place would have acted similarly."

"I don't know. You must be very resourceful," said Jill. She got off the couch as she spoke. "I'll fix up a little."

"Don't hurry," said Meldreth. "Breakfast isn't till 9. Is there anything you want?"

"Nothing, thanks—unless—do you mind if I use your brushes?" Jill asked. "I started out with a suitcase, but I must have lost that, too."

"Do. Use anything."

As she left an entertained expression showed on his face. This girl Jill was rather delightful. Bohemian, of course. Being an actress, she was not disturbed by the conventions. That explained her easy manner, without a doubt. Additionally, she was quite charming to look at—charming enough to pass the time with . . . pleasantly.

Last night, when she had been unconscious, Meldreth's abundant sense of chivalry would not have permitted him to dwell upon any possible developments the situation might take on; but today was altogether different. . . . And the night passed.

He heard Jill singing. What a pretty voice she had, too. It was birdlike, with trilling high notes. He couldn't catch the words of the refrain, but it sounded frolicsome.

The song subsided and a few minutes later Parton appeared on the scene.

Meldreth was ready for him. He had framed up how he should deal with his valet. A day off was the easiest and simplest way.

"Good morning, Parton," he said. "I meant to have told you last night that I shan't be requiring you at all today. Light the fire, lay breakfast and leave all the rest. I'm starting out early, most probably. I'll send word when I want you. Here's a shopping list. Order these things in the village to be put up today."

Parton murmured, "Very good, my lord." And added, "Bacon and eggs, my lord?"

"No. Cold ham and brawn. We'll—I'll boil our own eggs."

The astute servant noticed the slip of plurality.

"Our" eggs seemed to point to a visitor—a visitor who was certainly not to be seen but whom he distinctly thought he had heard as he approached the cottage. . . . The sound of a girl's voice singing . . . unless his lordship had turned on the gramophone . . . a [illegible] sort of thing to do so early in the day. There was a gramophone in the cottage . . . It was there [illegible] closed, piled high with [illegible] and crowned with Meldreth's [illegible] impedimenta . . . No, he was a mad enough nobleman in his [illegible] especially where ladies were concerned—like so many of Parton's titled and high-born masters had been—but he certainly hadn't been playing the gramophone at eight o'clock in the morning. [illegible] was a woman in [illegible] Parton, had been given a day off to throw dust in his eyes. [illegible] didn't want [illegible] anyway, [illegible]

Parton [illegible] lit the fire and set the breakfast out.

"Be quick," said Meldreth curtly. "You needn't wait for the kettle to boil. I've told you I'll see to that today."

"What about the bedroom, my lord?"

Parton looked blandly into his employer's face.

"You can leave that too. [illegible]—that's all for today, my [illegible]."

"Quite."

"Bayliss Allen?" questioned Helen in astonishment. "Drinking?"

And Perkins nodded in affirmation of both questions. "On the couch in the pink drawing room, he is. He'll soon be all right. Tom's put an ice bag on his head."

"Oh, dear," Helen cried. "To think that Julia Allen's son—Why, I always thought him such a nice boy, Perkins! We must keep him here tonight, if possible. I'll phone his mother. She must not learn the truth—it would kill her!"

"I believe it would be wise, Ma'am," said Perkins, "to do as you suggest.

"As to the other—the young woman," he continued. "I think she's more frightened than hurt, but I've taken the liberty of sending for an ambulance."

"I'll be down immediately and see what can be done for her," Helen told him. She was worried by the expression in Perkins' face when he referred to Bayliss Allen's companion.

She reached the lower hall as the front door was opened by Tom, the second man, to admit the hospital internes with a stretcher.

"I can walk—take that thing away!" a high voice shrilled from the back hall, and Helen saw a little crimson clad figure with a very white face on which two startling red spots of rouge stood out crudely. The girl sprang from the divan, took a few uncertain steps toward them. Then she crumpled at their feet with a faint moan. There was blood on the scarlet bow of her lips and her hands clutched convulsively.

"I'm afraid she's badly hurt," one of the internes said.

They gathered her up and deftly placed her on the stretcher, carried her through the still open door to the waiting car, their very haste bespeaking their concern.

"Excuse me, Mrs. Holmes, but can you give me the driver's name?"

Helen turned to face an officer of the law, whose presence she had not noted before. He stood before her now, tall and stern, a notebook in his hand, in which he scribbled hastily.

"The driver?" she asked in bewilderment.

"The young man who caused all this—driving in an intoxicated condition. I saw how he collapsed after the car was smashed and had to be brought in here. It'll go hard with him," the policeman added in ominous tones, "if that girl dies."

"Bayliss Allen? You mean he was driving—is responsible?"

"Where does his father live?" asked the policeman, ignoring her question.

"He—he doesn't live with his father," Helen told him in a trembling voice. "His parents are divorced and his mother has raised him. I know her well."

The policeman shut his note-book with a snap and eyed her intently.

"I'll go over with you," she began, "perhaps——"

"I'd like to have Mr. Holmes go, too," the policeman said.

Helen flushed. "I'll call him—he's at the club," she said.

Although she was very weary the next morning, Helen arose at an early hour. She had not been able to sleep, thinking of Bayliss Allen, that nice boy, so carefully reared by his mother!

Sam was surprised to see her as he came in to breakfast. She turned a gray face to him and tried to smile.

"I've just phoned the hospital," he told her after an awkward silence. "The girl's going to be all right. She was simply weak from the shock and had cut her mouth. It bled and scared those young doctors out of their wits. But she'll be up and out in a few hours."

"Oh, I'm so glad," cried Helen, her face lighting up wonderfully. "I—well—I was afraid last night to tell Julia about the girl. I suppose she really should know—now. And yet she was so upset just to hear of the accident—and of Bayliss' drinking. You saw how unable she was to cope with the situation! She kept asking me to advise her. Of course Bayliss will be arrested—but don't you think they may let him off with a fine—he's so young?"

"Don't know," answered Sam in a worried tone. "Bayliss is twenty-one. And you know the laws here are strict about things of that sort."

"It will kill Julia—the disgrace! Thought it might have been much worse. I—I just couldn't advise her what to do, Sam!"

Sam looked up from his grapefruit sharply. "I told her what to do," he said. "I told her to wire Tom Allen to come home and take charge of his son."

In the silence of the room the French clock on the mantel rang a silvery chime of bells and then struck the hour of nine—gay, staccato notes which sounded incongruous to Helen in the tenseness of her mood. And in the instant her mind slipped back along the years.

The French clock had been a wedding gift. Her wedding morning—the old church banked with flowers and [illegible] sunshine on a smiling world. She remembered the deep toned organ and the voices of the choir. She remembered the minister, garbed in white and black robes of [illegible], towering above her and speaking in a slow, distinct monotone.

"For better—or for worse—"

"For better—or for worse—" she had repeated after him bravely. Hadn't she meant it—really?

Suddenly she was surprised to feel the tears upon her cheeks, to feel the arms of Sam about her. Only a little sympathy—that was all. And wasn't she big enough to forget those silly women he'd mocked her with—big enough to hold him now—forever? Hold him for Junior as well as for herself.

"A boy needs his father," she heard herself saying in a small voice. "We both need your protection, and—I think Junior and I won't go after all!"

"I think we both understand better—what we owe to Junior, Helen, after—after last night! A boy needs both his parents. And as for me—I need your love, Dear!" And Junior's father very humbly kissed Junior's mother.

RUTH SNYDER WRITES LONG MESSAGE TO LORRAINE

faction in service and usefulness will repay you for everything you may miss.

SHOULD BE FIRST

Don't think that because I did otherwise I should be the last to preach such gospel to you. It is quite the other way. Because I did otherwise, because I am paying more heavily than I can ever make you know, because I now see from the dark valley of sorrow how I could have lived my given life in truth and faith and content, I should be the first to leave to you this message so that you may be saved the penalties heaped upon me.

Though much that the world has done to me is unjust, still I laid myself bare to it by the sins I did do. And had the just and unjust woes beset me even more heavily, had I been armed with a true, staunch faith and a Christian fortitude, they could not have touched me.

Believe me, my own and only, my words are from the bottom of my heavy heart, under which your life first beat and which will beat for you to the end.

Be kind to grandmother. She loves you and has suffered much for you and for your poor mother.

Be charitable to those who will, perhaps, speak and act cruelly toward you because of me. Forgive them, for they know not what they do. Live in true humility before God, but fear not the stings of men.

To help you in that way, teach yourself to think of your mother as one who loves you, and one who though she sinned, repented.

RECALL SWEET DAYS

Try to recall those sweet days before our trouble, when you lay in my arms and I in yours, when you were my baby and I was your mommy.

Do not let them tell you that I was all wicked. They cannot. Smile when they say so. They make anyone else, almost, believe it. But not you, my baby, not you.

Keep this letter, always.

When doubt assails you, when fear overtakes you, when shame shadows you—read it again.

When I am gone treasure it as my last—my only heritage to you.

Don't weep for me.

Everything is as it should be. "Thy will be done!"

But don't, above all else, forget me.

Obey all the Commandments, and one of them is:

"Honor thy father and thy mother"—

And I am your mother!

With these few lines, with a kiss and with all the affectionate outpourings of my body and my soul.

Good-bye, my own, and may God in His infinite mercy shield you, bless you and take you. Again, good-bye.

MOTHER.

MEDBURY SAYS---

By JOHN P. MEDBURY

SEVERAL politicians claim that after the 1928 election, the Volstead law will be repealed. The wets are going to the polls to cast their votes and they'll use flasks for ballot boxes.

THE anti-prohibition ticket will be printed on corks.

THE saloon league will be known as the non-refillable party.

THE wets are going to put a ducking stool on the end of their plank.

IT'S embarrassing to live in a free country and have to go to Canada every time you get thirsty.

AN American citizen likes to be able to have something on his hip besides rheumatism.

PEOPLE in the United States were so dry that Ontario had to go wet.

GREATER love than this hath no country for her aliens.

THE beer in Canada is so good that thousands of tourists have already taken out their first papers.

AND thousands more will rush there this Summer to be neutralized.

PROHIBITION succeeded in taking husbands out of saloons, and now it's taking them out of the country.

MILLIONS of wives are trying to repeal the law in order to bring them back home.

ONE woman says her husband works in Detroit and drinks his salary in Windsor.

CANADA is curing his throat trouble.

THE people are drinking to more healths in Windsor than they are in Battle Creek.

THERE'S only one way the reformers can enforce prohibition and that's to repeal the law and make drinking compulsory.

THE MEDITATIONS OF A WIFE

By HELEN ROWLAND

I WANT a lot of things in life—
I scarce know where to start!
But, most, I want a poet's eyes—
And, oh, a singing heart!

I ask so many things of life—
I am no modest dove!
A little house, a garden patch—
But most, a little LOVE!

Why will a man marry a girl with a baby-face and a half-sized foot, and then consider himself cheated, when he discovers that she has a brain to match?

* * *

Nothing daunts these modern girls! Now that the men are fed up on knees, they are resorting to immodest exposure of the ears in order to attract attention.

* * *

If a girl doesn't become familiar with a man's handwriting before marriage, she won't have much chance to learn anything about it afterward in these days of telephones and night-lettergrams.

* * *

Alas, so many men scatter their cigarettes, compliments and kisses around carelessly, regardless of the dangerous holocausts they may be starting.

* * *

There are a few things that simply will not MIX, in this life—oil and water; literary ambition and matrimony; work and alcohol; sex-appeal and domesticity; and love and common sense!

* * *

When a man "opens his heart" to a woman over forty, it is usually to tell her about another woman. No man wants "advice" from a woman's lips as long as they are still worth kissing!

* * *

Love-pirate's slogan: "Let me share a man's luncheons—and I care not WHO keeps his dinners waiting!"

FOR Sour Stomach
PHILLIPS' Milk of Magnesia

Hereafter instead of soda take a little "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" in water any time for indigestion or sour, acid, gassy stomach and relief will come instantly.

Better Than Soda

For fifty years genuine "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" has been prescribed by physicians because it overcomes three times as much acid in the stomach as a saturated solution of bicarbonate of soda, leaving the stomach sweet and free from all gases. Besides, it neutralizes acid, gently urges this souring waste from the system without purging. It is far more pleasant to take than soda.

Try a 25c Bottle

Insist upon "Phillips." Twenty-five cent and fifty cent bottles, any drugstore. "Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade Mark of The Charles H. Phillips Chemical Company and its predecessor Charles H. Phillips since 1875.

Materialism Dealt Blow by This Mother and Son

By B. C. FORBES

NEW YORK, June 20.—We are a nation of materialists. We are a nation of idealists. We are an amazing mixture of both.

In no other nation does daily conversation center so much on money. In no other nation is money given away so lavishly for unselfish purposes.

* * *

LINDBERGH'S achievement and its aftermath will do much to build up aviation in this country. But it may do infinitely more to build up character.

B. C. Forbes

George M. Cohan, the theatrical producer, aptly observed that young Lindbergh had achieved the phenomenal feat of making the people of the United States forget about money-making.

HAVE NOT too many of us become accustomed to regarding money and money-making as the supreme object of life? Have we not enthroned wealth and fallen down and worshiped it? Has not gold been set up as a god?

Have not far too many of us been ready to sacrifice everything in our chase after possessions? Have we not become obsessed by the importance of things, of the means for indulging in extravagance, luxury, ostentation.

* * *

ALL OF a sudden there descends from the clouds a hitherto obscure, unsung American youth who, deluged with offers of untold wealth, spurns them all as so much dross. When the devil took Christ to the top of a high mountain and tempted him by offering him all the kingdoms of the world, Christ said, "Get thee behind me, Satan." Charles A. Lindbergh, without hesitation or counsel, immediately rejected all the glittering allurements to turn from his life's objective for the sake of hastily amassing millions.

FOILED BY youth, often more idealistic than mercenary, the tempters turned confidently to middle-age, to the young man's widowed mother, plodding along earning a modest living and unable all through her life to revel in the many things money alone could command. In a few short weeks or months she could lift herself forever beyond the necessity for the daily toil that had been her lot and bask in the limelight of the most flattering publicity.

But, lo, this mother, like this son, firmly refused to sacrifice her innate dignity for the sake of pelf. The blandishments spread before her she promptly spurned, choosing rather to continue following her chosen duty of devoting her days, her vitality, her heart to educating the youth of America. Like son, like mother—each elected to follow a mission rather than exploit for preferred millions the fame that had come to them.

WILL NOT the example set by this mother and son do much to raise the world's conception of Americans and do much, also, to teach Americans a truer appreciation, a more rational perspective of life's real values? Has not materialism received an effective blow and has not idealism been vitally furthered?

* * *

OUR CAPITALISTS, our financiers, our industrialists, our business leaders are not by any means the only ones in need of such a wholesome lesson. Covetousness, greed of possession is as rampant among the rest of us as it is among those already favored financially by fortune.

* * *

BOTH Charles A. Lindbergh and his mother have made us all their debtors.

EDITORIAL PAGE OF THE ☆ ☆ BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN ☆ ☆ BOSTON JUNE 21, 1927

THE BOSTON AMERICAN'S PLATFORM FOR BOSTON AND NEW ENGLAND

For BOSTON:
1—Clean streets.
2—Solution of traffic and parking problems.
3—Better pay for honest public service.
4—An airport SECOND TO NONE.
5—Erection of a MUNICIPAL AUDITORIUM to compare with any in the land; in order that Boston, properly supplied with first-class hotels may be the premier convention city of the U. S. A.

For NEW ENGLAND:
1—Weld the six States into a unit through the activities of the New England Council, thus creating a community consciousness.
2—Promote intercourse with Central and South America, encouraging New Englanders to "turn to the sea" again.
3—Keeping everlastingly at the job of telling the rest of the country all about our unique advantages as Summer and Winter Playground of the Nation.
4—Foster the prosperity of our industries through (1) greater efficiency in production and (2) the use of modern methods in merchandising.
5—Promote in every way such natural resources as forests, water powers and fisheries.
6—Assist New England agriculture to better marketing methods.

"One-Hour Parking"

How They Get Around It in Springfield

If Justice Wallace R. Heady could be "Springfield's Mussolini," he says, he would solve Springfield's traffic problem by putting an end to the parked-car nuisance.

Springfield looks upon the "no-parking" proposal as "radical," and apparently will have none of it, but the motion is before the house and is being discussed as no similar suggestion ever has been.

"These long lines of parked cars, day after day," Justice Heady says, "are an abuse of a privilege.

"By subterfuge and evasion, the 'one-hour parking' rule has been nullified. Men come out and move their cars every hour. The best people in Springfield are moving them; they have told me so.

"I think the 'one-hour parking' rule should be extended a half mile beyond the limits of the central district.

"Three-fourths, if not nine-tenths, of the people who now encumber the streets with their cars haven't a really good reason for parking, or for using their cars every day, for that matter. The use of the trolley within the city would relieve congestion, reduce danger and enable the street railway company to cut its fares."

Here in Boston, one has only to gaze out upon any of the streets in the so-called downtown section to find himself wondering what would happen if suddenly any considerable part of the Fire Department were called to a fire of proportions.

The judge of the Springfield District Court says the parked car figures in "three-fourths of the accidents," in his jurisdiction. We have not seen the corresponding figures for Boston, but everyone hereabout knows the parked car presents a problem which eventually MUST be solved.

IS Justice Heady's way THE way? Springfield says "No!"—but continues to discuss it.

Montreal's Epidemic

A "Potential" Menace to the Health of New England

Officers of the United States Public Health Service, some of whom are now in Montreal for the purpose of getting the facts as to the source and extent of the typhoid fever epidemic, suggest that it will be of definite advantage for communities and resorts in northern New England to let the public know what precautions they have taken to safeguard the health and lives of residents and visitors.

On the last day of March, the number of typhoid cases REPORTED in Montreal was 1,540.

The number now has passed the 4,000-mark.

The Public Health Service sees a potential threat to the health of New England, particularly the Northern resorts, in Montreal's carriers of fever germs.

"There are several thousand typhoid fever germ carriers in Montreal," Acting Surgeon-General Pierce says, "and it appears to be urgent for both visitors and residents to be inoculated so as to prevent them contracting typhoid fever from this large number of carriers."

So far as New England is concerned, the Health Service recommends as of PARAMOUNT importance:

1—Sanitary methods of sewage disposal.
2—Adequate protection of water and milk supplies.
3—Bacteriological examinations of food handlers.

The disease has been abnormally prevalent in Montreal for six or eight months. The United States health officers are taking steps to prevent its spreading to this side of the line. Local health authorities are bringing the situation to the attention of other officials in their communities.

There is, as yet, no "scare," and no one in New England would wilfully do anything to annoy or injure the City of Montreal or the Province of Quebec. It appears, rather, to be a situation where an ounce of prevention may be worth a pound of cure; where "forewarned is forearmed."

Give your local health officers your heartiest support in such steps as they may deem it proper to take for the protection of the community.

Lowell "Dresses Up"

Smartly—and in Her Own Cottons!

Any community which at a time of business depression will courageously stage such a "cotton carnival" as Lowell set forth a night or two ago, in the Memorial Auditorium, is at least deserving of better times.

The idea is credited to the fertile brain of Representative Edith Nourse Rogers. The Mayor, the Chamber of Commerce, the superintendent of schools, the president of the Textile School, and the people as a whole, appear to have rallied 'round their Member of Congress.

THREE HUNDRED girls paraded the Auditorium in frocks and dresses THEY had made from LOWELL-MANUFACTURED cottons.

Prizes were awarded for the best-made and most tastefully designed dresses, as well as for the best shirts, made for men. There were essay prizes, too.

It was at Rye Beach last week, before the New England Council, that Dr. Frank M. Surface, of the United States Department of Commerce, declared that, "One of these days, New England is going to show the rest of the country what is going on, and the rest of the country is GOING TO BE SURPRISED."

Dr. Surface may have had in mind the industrial and marketing survey of New England, made by his department at the instigation of the Council. Surely the rest of the country will not be surprised to learn that New England NEVER waits to have the battle brought to it, but is ever ready.

The spirit manifested by Lowell is the New England spirit. Cottons have come back. Lowell wants the world to know of her preparedness.

The people of the Spindle City BELIEVE in their town. All New England will be glad when the word comes that every Lowell mill is working "to capacity."

Incidentally, how long will it be before the rest of Massachusetts takes note of the fact that the Member of Congress from the Fifth District is an exceptionally able woman?

RAILROAD IS GREAT AS CIVILIZER

By DR. FRANK CRANE

THE greatest civilizer in the world and the greatest peacemaker are the railroads. The lines running from the North to the South did more to reunite the country after the Civil War than all the vaporings of the politicians.

A new line has been opened up at an expense of some $14,000,000 in Mexico, running from LaQuemada, in the State of Jalisco to Tepic in the State of Nayarit. This is about 103 miles, and it had been called "impractical if not impossible," but its completion is a tribute to the skill of American railroad builders.

This new line opens up a direct rail route from the west coast to central Mexico. It assures the development of a great region that has hitherto been unexploited, a region rich in agricultural and industrial possibilities and one of the most lovely scenic places in the railroad world.

As soon as it is feasible, Pullman and dining car service will be established directly between Mexico City and Los Angeles and San Francisco.

The rails have been laid through mountain ranges and canyons with a maximum gradient of 1 per cent. and maximum curves of six degrees metric.

It was fitting that President Calles should officiate at the official inauguration of the line, for it means much to his country.

Such a line will do much to consolidate the peoples of the United States and Mexico. Whatever improves commerce and communication generally between the two nations is of value.

It is probably the greatest achievement in the history of engineering in Mexico and one of the greatest in the world.

Much of the progress of nations is due to the engineer. He is the real civilizer for he is roadmaker, and civilization, in its last analysis, is its transportation.

It will be found that backward countries, such as China and others, are seats of racial prejudice, due to isolation, and nothing disperses such ignorance as much as facilities for transportation.

When China ceases to be the country of the ox cart and becomes a country of the railroad it will be a different country.

IRON MAN

ALFRED D. EATON of Revere manager of one of the Chamber of Commerce soda dispensaries, is such a tireless worker that patrons refer to him as the "iron man." The big fellow has been plugging the interests of his employer for years and defies nature by averaging about four hours sleep at night. Seldom does EATON feel that his job can afford him taking a Sunday to himself. He shuns recreation and gets fat on work.

VISITING

Some years ago, JOSEPH FLANAGAN, municipal court employe, struck into Azusa, California, with one of his brothers. Both, thanks to a hospitable native there, enjoyed their stay immensely and saw practically all places of interest. The brothers offered a thousand thank-yous, but left California wishing they could do more. Their wish has finally come true. The gentleman who was so very nice to them is now honoring the FLANAGAN family with a visit here. And try as Joe has, he has so far failed to convince his friend that he'll make a mistake by returning to his homeland.

CLIPPINGS

HARVEY B. HUDSON, clerk in the municipal criminal court, doesn't believe in trusting accounts of national and international events to memory. HUDSON is a close reader of the daily newspapers and has for years been clipping from them stories that should be remembered. Included in his filing cabinets are complete accounts of the World War and of the progress of aviation since when he was able to read.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

"I DON'T believe in worrying," you cry. "I take things as they come."

Do you? So does a polyp.

A polyp is a simple soul. It is a gob of animated jelly, a poor relation to the jelly fish and coral. It has an inside and an appetite, but not much else. It has no backbone, no complicated "vital organs," no head, no tail or sense of direction or plan of existence.

The baby polyp drifts with the current. When the current wafts it against a projection it sticks there, moving sluggishly at the will of the waters, eating whatever the tide brings, or doing without.

The polyp literally "takes things as they come." It does not worry. It does not hustle. Doubtless this happy-go-lucky attitude has its advantages. Polyps get a lot of free meals. But no one ever respects a polyp's feelings or asks a polyp's advice. And the total polyp contribution to the hall of fame is exactly nil.

On the other hand, there's the worm.

The worm is also humble, but it's a hustler.

Goes After it

It knows what it wants and it goes after it. It doesn't drift with the current—it shapes its own destiny. Life stopped being a passive participant with worms and started to go ahead. It no longer functioned merely as an animated gob of jelly. It began to be an individual, with a purpose. And the more purpose it acquired—the more it wanted to do and was willing to do—the more chances it took and adventures it sought—the more of an individual it became.

Into the jelly-like cells came blood and nerves, brains, muscles and kidneys, the organs of sex. Most significant of all, into them came a suggestion of a back bone and spinal cord. That was the beginning of the Vertebrate Life which was to produce Man—there, in that first bunch of jelly that refused to "take things as they came" and decided to go after them—Creation's first Go-Getter.

Polyps—there are plenty of them in the human ranks. People who "take things as they come"—who refuse to worry and don't believe in taking risks. Creatures of circumstance who are always "waiting for a run of luck"—who expect someone else to make them happy and who blame someone else if they are sad.

Not the Point

A great many married ladies are polyps—and an increasing number of husbands of working wives. We all have our polypish moments when we expct the Family, or the Government or God to look out for our interests instead of attending to them ourselves.

I TAKE THINGS AS THEY COME
SAP!
ELSIE ROBINSON
6-21

And the more we leave things to chance, the less chance will do for us.

If you want to get anything out of life you must put something into it. You must start moving—run risks—make a plan. It may be a foolish plan and it may not work, but that isn't the point. Any plan is better than no plan at all for even the feeblest plan is a challenge in the face of Fate and will work wonders within you, growing a spine and a brain where there was jelly before.

So don't take things as they come. GO AFTER THEM!

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By ALINE MICHAELIS

THE clouds are very white today (how fast, how far they race!), brave sail-boats venturing away across the deeps of space. Their whiteness makes the azure hue of heaven's sea more fair, and lends a beauty to that blue no cloudless sky could wear. And where their fleeting shadow flecks the green of fields and woods a deeper loveliness bedecks the earth for these swift moods. Ah, sweet, may all the clouds you know be only such as these that fleetly come and fleetly go on tranquil turquoise seas! May they, like these, be white and swift and, passing, leave no trace to mar the light of joys adrift across your eager face. Not like grim storms whose forces swerve the currents of delight, may all your troubles only serve to make life's bliss more bright.
